Senate Lobby Probe Begins Examination Of Col. M. M. Mulhall

VOLUME X, NUMBER 49. LA CROSSE, WISCONSIN, SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1913. PRICE TWO CENTS

On The Great White Way

NEAR-NEWS AND CHATTER FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

To the lady first correctly guessing the identity of the person of whom the following is a character sketch, and bringing a copy of this paper to The Tribune office, a cash prize of $1.00 will be given. The subject of the sketch is a prominent citizen of La Crosse. After winning one prize, a contestant will not be eligible to again compete for a period of three months.

One might suspect from his name that he's Scotch, from his habits that he's German, from his disposition that he's made up of the good of all nations. All the roses in the world are in his complexion, and his rotundity is his maximum distinguishing feature. There's good humor in every inch of him until, having turned the other cheek until forbearance ceases to be a virtue, he begins to demand an eye for an eye—whereat he becomes rather stupendously militant. He wears in Summer a suit of hair-cloth upholstery of southern habitat which renders him like unto the old sofa in grandmother's parlor. He's boss of the factory which occupies the time he rather indifferently devotes to business, so he cannot be canned, but he's the only thing in the factory that isn't canned. Among his friends he is known as "the capitalist," the term being a benediction or an epithet according to the humor of the person employing it. At any rate, he has some color of title to it. To prove this, you can see the color of his money any time, provided you kept your word with him the last time. He inherits in a large measure his family pride and, obesity notwithstanding, dignity. "Highland or lowland, far or near," he's hard to beat. If anybody tells you of a better fellow, please say for the White Way editor that "there ain't no such thing."

If there hadn't been a physician in the family it might never have happened to Gus Dollert, although Gus is there with a vandyke beard and professional air that may explain both the St. Francis Hospital affair and the eminence of his precocious progeny, Dr. F. F. Dollert, sociologist, surgeon, tuberculosis expert and professor of something with a long name in Marquette University.

It all came about along o' one of the men in the Advance Bedding company's mattress factory having three fingers crushed. Mattress fell on 'em, no doubt. Anyway, Superintendent Dollert sent him to the hospital with orders to "treat him like a brother," and a few hours later, accompanied by Anton Schaeffer, of Milwaukee, who was his guest at the time, went to St. Francis to cheer the victim of the vivisectionists. Mr. Schaeffer also is of that serious mien common to physicians and other humorists, which helped with the fitness of the cast.

Now there's no more ox-hearted fellow in the world that Gus Dollert, so as he went through the hospital on his way to his employe's room he could not resist pausing at the doors through which convalescents were seen, to ask after their welfare and pass a cheering word.

Who but a doctor could do that, and so, piping the vandyke and the professional air, a sister approached.

"Were you looking for anyone in particular, Doctor?" she asked.

Gus let it go at that, and soon he was being taken through the hospital, while a smiling nurse was saying "Doctor, this," and "Doctor that" at every step.

Finally Dr. G. J. Egan heard the talk, and took the visitors off Nurse's hands.

"Howdydo, Dr. Dollert," he said, extending his hand, "I'm Dr. Egan."

Gus acknowledged the introduction and nurse introduced "Dr. Schaeffer, who grinned an amused acknowledgement.

"Let me show you the operating room," said Dr. Egan, and the visitors may be pardoned if they exchanged winks as they followed the surgeon down the corridor.

For a time all went well. Dr. Egan called attention to the apparatus in the professional technique one physician uses to another, which was all Greek to the visitors, but which they heard with learned nods. At last the show over, friend Schaeffer observed that one instrument (known as an injector) had been overlooked. He caught Dr. Egan's eye, and pointed to it.

"What's that, a beer pump?" he asked, innocently.

And then it came out, but hence and evermore Gus Dollert will be "Doc" ,which peeves him not at all, for as he says:

"Now when I meet 'Doc' Skinner at the Elks' club we hold a clinic on the corpus delicti of Carl Michel's genius."

DOC SAYS:

Speaking of Gettysburg it's interesting to visit these old battlefields where we have fought and fled.

If one were passing out medals to the best of good fellows, one couldn't Skip Verket.

Skip (I. O.) Verket is in La Crosse renewing his acquaintance with the city of his birth. Almost tearfully, but joyfully, joyfully! he is shaking the hands of old pals—friends of peace and war and politics.

Skip hadn't forgot that he was a "D. M.," having won honors on the state rifle team when he was acting lineal dimension of Company M, Third regiment, W. N. G. So, straightway upon his arrival here, Skip went out with his old comrades and shot up the targets with such bullseye precision that he brought all the trophies into camp.

Then, just for that, Johnnie Williams took him out to the Athletic Bowling club to trim him down to modest dimensions, but even here participants had cause to recall the former prowess of Skip in the good days when, with Billy Ott, he divided honors as the best ten pin bowler in La Crosse and this city's pride in the state tourney. In fact, Mr. Williams had to pass up the trimming job to John Burns, who just that malted milk might not sneer at lager beer, took first thousand and high score. For Skip, erstwhile on the clerical staff of the John Gund Brewing company, is now one of the men who are putting over Horlick's Malted Milk, in the city of Racine, where for several years he has sojourned without a glimpse of home.

Not only a bowler and a crack rifleman was Skip. He was a politician, also. He was one of the men who knew which way the Eighth and Eighteenth were going—knew it just as positively as the fellow knew it who knew it was going the other way. Skip had a following out there, and his votes usually figured in the finish. By the way, John Burns dug from the musty archives of memory an indebtedness to Skip for acting as first aid to the injured during a once justly celebrated and now forgotten ruction in which a bipartisan partisan of John's nonpartisan democratic candidate was rescued from a sign-language debate in which all signs pointed to his protesting chin.

Come again, Skip—and not so long between drinks!

MEET TO RATIFY VOTE TO STRIKE

Committee of 11,000 of the Eastern Trainmen and Conductors in Session in New York

NO DOUBT OF THEIR ACTION

Appears Certain They Will Be Practically Unanimous in Favor of Walk-out

NEW YORK, July 12.—The committee of one thousand of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railroad Conductors today met to ratify the strike of their 100,000 members on the forty-two eastern railroads. That the committee of 1,000 will sanction practically unanimously the aye vote cast by 75,734 trainmen and conductors, appeared certain. The one uncertainty today was whether the committee would formally ratify the walkout today or tomorrow. The chance for an eleventh hour offer of an immediate peaceful settlement from the railroads is remote.

The demands of the conductors and trainmen is for an average of twenty per cent increase in wages. The average wages now paid are, passenger conductors $1,767; passenger trainmen, $1,027; freight conductors, $1,313; freight trainmen, $859.80; yard conductors, $1,234.63; yard trainmen, $1,042.

No decision had been reached this afternoon by the committee. Another session will be held and the decision may not be reached until tonight.

The committee decided to take no chances on a dictaphone being placed in their meeting hall, so no announcement was made as to the place of meeting until the committee went into session at Webster hall. The officers of the unions predicted that the strike vote would be ratified.

BULGARIAN ARMS GIVEN FINAL BLOW

Greeks and Servians Combine to Capture Important City Of Seres

ATHENS, July 12.—Details of the fighting about Seres received here today and officially given out at the palace confirm the reports that the Greeks have occupied Seres. The defeat of the Bulgarians at that place was effected, so the reports of today read, through a brilliant strategical movement of the Greek troops who effected a junction with the Servians. The occupation of Seres by Greeks and Servians is a final blow to the Bulgarian arms and makes more gloomy the hopes of Czar Ferdinand.

With the announcement of this latest reverse to the Bulgarians also came details of bloody toll taken from the residents of Seres just before the Bulgarians retreated. Two hundred Greek residents, including several high churchmen, one of them a bishop and a score or more of notables, were huddled into a small yard like so many sheep and shot down, after they had been subjected to unspeakable indignities.

The dispatches which tell of this massacre make no mention of the women and children as having been among the slain.

The tales told by the residents when the Greeks and Servians occupied the town were so terrible that the Greek commander of the sixth division had the bodies disinterred from graves hastily made by the Bulgarians. The mutilated forms of the dead bore out the stories of the massacre.

STANLEY PASSES LIE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—David Lamar, Edward Lauterbach and Secretary Henry B. Martin of the antitrust league, were collectively and individually denounced today in the house by Representative Stanley of Kentucky, head of the recent steel trust investigation for "boasting" before the senate lobby committee that they figured in drafting the house resolution of inquiry. Stanley declared "absurd and untrue" the alleged participation of Lauterbach and Martin in presenting the resolution to him.

WOULD RENEW PROBE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Renewal of the money trust investigation was proposed in a resolution introduced today in the house by Henry of Texas, author of the original investigation.

DENY BECKER NEW TRIAL

NEW YORK, July 12.—Former Police Lieut. Charles Becker, convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was today denied a new trial in a decision handed down by Supreme Court Justice Goff.

DREAM LEADS TO A VALUABLE FIND

E. D. Wermuth Dives Into River Where He Saw a Pearl in Vision and Finds It

GEM IS WORTH ABOUT $500

Tells Companions About Dream and Then Makes It Come True

What is the stuff dreams are made of? If you really want to know ask E. D. Wermuth, proprietor of The Wet Goods, 114 North Third street. Last Wednesday night Mr Wermuth dreamed he saw a beautiful pink pearl lying on the bottom of the Missippi river. The next day he dove in where he had seen the gem in his vision and found two clams which when opened revealed one white pearl worth about fifty dollars and another lavender pearl worth about $500.

Mr. Wermuth had been camping with Fred Weigent on the Wisconsin shore about half a mile above the Milwaukee railroad bridge. Wednesday night as he lay sleeping he was restless and finally he dreamed. He dreamed that he could see the bottom of the river in front of his camp and on the bottom was a beautiful pink pearl. The pearl appeared to be resting among a large number of clam shells and in plain sight on the sand of the bottom. Mr. Wermuth describes his dream as the most vivid he ever had.

The next day at dinner he told his companions, Fred Weigent, George Herken and a traveling trunk salesman, who were visiting him and Mr. Weigent at the camp, that he had seen the pearl in his sleep and intended to go after it.

"Boys, there is a big pearl lying on the bottom of the river right there," he said, pointing toward the spot he had seen in his dream. "I saw it in my sleep last night."

The rest of the party laughed and in a joking manner urged him to dive in and get it.

Mr. Wermuth, loathe to take a dare, stripped and dove into the river into about eight feet of water. He came up with a clam in each hand. He opened the clams and two glimmering pearls greeted the astonished gaze of his companions. One was a small but perfectly round white pearl worth about $50, while the other was lavender colored and about the size of a large pea. It is without a flaw and is valued by Mr. Wermuth at $500.

Mr. Wermuth declares that he is not superstitious, but he says that mere coincidence is not sufficient explanation of his dream and find. His companions bear him out in his story and he has the pearls to show as the proof. Later in the day he found several other clams which yielded three large slugs.

20,000 IN FESTIVAL

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 12.—An aerogram received by the United Fruit company states that twenty thousand persons are today participating in the last Isthmian festival in Panama, under the auspices of the canal commission Representatives of twenty-one nations participated. The English crew won the international boat race against nine countries.

Fifteen hundred couples will dance at the closing ball tonight.

BARGE SINKS; TWO DROWN

DUNKIRK, N. Y., July 12.—A coal barge from Erie, Pa., to Port Colburne, Ont., sprung a leak near the breakwater here this afternoon and sank before rescuing tugs could reach her. The captain and his wife were reported drowned. Three members of the crew were picked up alive.

MRS. A. E. BLEEKMAN DIES AT ROCHESTER

Surgeons Unable to Save Her Life After Three Operations for Enlargement of Artery

FUNERAL TO BE HELD AT SPARTA

Widow of Noted Attorney Is Survived by One Son, Adelbert E. Bleekman

Mrs. Adelbert E. Bleekman died in the hospital at Rochester, Minn., yesterday afternoon at 4:30. She was 66 years of age. Death followed the last of three operations that were performed on an enlarged artery in the neck. The enlargement of the artery caused a pressure on her brain which the surgeon attempted to remove.

Mrs. Bleekman was before her marriage, Miss Alice Bush. She was born in Tomah, and married Mr. Bleekman August 24, 1876. Mrs. Bleekman lived here until October, 1909, when Mr. Bleekman died. Mr. Bleekman was elected to the assembly of Wisconsin in the fall of 1872, and in the coming year he was chosen to represent his party in the state senate.

Since the time of her husband's death Mrs. Bleekman has not made La Crosse her permanent home, although she has spent a part of the time here. During the past winter she has been the guest of friends in Duluth. She was visiting at the home of Mrs. F. A. Ruplin, 1222 Madison street, at the time she was taken ill. She is survived by one son, Adelbert E. Bleekman, engaged in the practice of law in this city.c

The funeral services and burial will be held in Sparta, where Mr. Bleekman is burried. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed

$63,450 FOR THE TOMAH SCHOOL

Congressman Esch Procures Big Appropriation for the Indian Institution

More than $60,000 has been set aside for the Indian school at Tomah through the eforts of Congressman John J. Esch by the passage of the Indian appropriation bill which was signed by President Woodrow Wilson recently. The appropriation provides for the support and education of 250 pupils at the Tomah school and for the pay of the superintendent the sum of $43,450; for repairing and improvements to the buildings, $10,000; and for a new heating plant, $10,000. According to a statement made by Congressman Esch today he will attempt to obtain a further appropriation next year for the installation of an industrial department at the school. The Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., were appropriated $7,000 in the same bill.

FIRE DESTROYS ICEHOUSES

PEORIA, Ill., July 12.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed eight ice houses containing over 20,000 tons of ice here this morning. Four of the houses belonged to the Woodruff Ice company and the remaining four to the Detweiler Ice company.

The buildings destroyed were located on the river bank in the north part of the city. A stiff creeze sent burning embers broadcast and innumerable small fires were started. For a time the entire north end residence district was in peril. The loss will total $40,000.

SAYS CITY SCHOOLS WILL BURN QUICKLY

Fire Chief Bradfield Urges Automatic Sprinkler System in Report to the Council

ADVANCE WOMAN OFFICER BILL

Mayor's Ordinance for Probation Officer Goes to Second Reading and Is Referred

Every school in the city will burn, and that quickly, was the essence of a report rendered by Fire Chief Nathan Bradfield to the regular monthly meeting of the council last night. The fire chief has just completed an inspection of the schools of the city.

He says that despite the inflammable state of the buildings, children are in little danger because exits in every school but one are entirely adequate. The exception is the Lincoln school. Here the exits are too narrow for the children to escape quickly. Chief Bradfield recommends the erection of an outside iron stairway as an additional precaution against loss of life.

The system of fire drills in use in the schools is efficient, the chief's report continued, but it is not enough to insure against loss of life. Bradfield pointed out the results if a child should stumble and fall, or become unruly in line when the pupils were escaping from a blaze. He insisted that the way to make the schools perfectly safe was the installation of an automatic sprinkling system.

The report was referred to committees for recommendations as to action.

Pass Pool Room Rule

The new section to the pool room ordinance, providing a fine or revocation of license if owners keep them open after twelve o'clock at night, passed the council unanimously.

The pool hall and bowling alley license applications were brought in by the committee on license other than liquor. They recommended that all applicants be granted licenses, with the exception of George Tulumis, 329 Main street. Tulumis' record of having been fined in police court three times for violating the pool room ordinances was brought up to support their recommendation. The council acted in accordance with the committee's recommendation with no argument.

Mayor Ori J. Sorensen's ordinance creating the office of woman probation officer went to first and second readings and was referred to the proper committees. After the first reading Alderman Houska moved that the ordinance be laid on the table, saying that the city was unable to afford such an expense. The motion was lost, 13 to 7.

The bill provides for the employment at $900 a year of a woman probation officer, who shall have a separate office in the city hall, and pay particular attention to the cases of delinquent girls.

The meeting last night was a quiet one, except for a little ripple that came up when a resolution was introduced by Alderman Smith, asking that the sum of $15.85 be refunded to N. C. Bachlor for costs of a suit, said in the resolution to have been unjustly brought against him by the city. The suit was brought to collect a bill for trimming trees, the work having been done by the city. Mr. Bachellor proved that he had paid the bill and the suit was dropped.

Alderman Paul Mahoney was on his feet at once and urged that the resolution be killed. He said Mr. Bachellor had invited the suit, and insisted that they could not legally be held for counsel fees incurred by him. He threatened to bring suit to recover the refund if the council ordered it paid.

Smith Retorts Hotly

Alderman Smith came back at once with hot retort, in which he imputed to Mahoney political motives connected with the last municipal election for opposing the payment of the costs. He implied that the suit, which was instituted by former City Attorney Schubert on a resolution introduced by Mahoney, had been started from personal motives. The mayor put a stop to the argument by putting the matter to a vote. The council was divided, ten to ten, over the payment, and the mayor settled it that Mr. Bachellor should have his money by voting aye.

A resolution by Alderman Roellig, authorizing the board of public works to look into the cost of river dragging outfits for the recovery of bodies, and the purchase of one for the police department at a cost not more than $300 was referred to the proper committee.

There was more excitement when Alderman Smith, after introducing a resolution calling for the payment of $50 each to W. S. Woods, W. A. Thompson and W. J. Ferris, for their services as arbitrators in the controversy between the city and the Wisconsin Pearl Gutton works, characterized that price for the services of the engineers as a "hold up." Alderman Mahoney also objected to the amount, but as the engineers men-

MULHALL TELLS HOW HE ELECTED SENATOR ALDRICH

Former Lobbyist and Right Hand of N. A. M. Says He Used Labor Leaders in Political Fights

TALE ASTONISHES INQUIRERS

Amazed at Story of How He Hired Organized Labor Heads to Swing Elections

ONLY BEGINNING OF HIS STORY

Senate Swears Witness Last Night to Keep Him from the House Committee Investigators

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The complete story of how leaders of organized labor were utilized to reelect Nelson W. Aldrich, United States senator from Rhode Island and to defeat Louis E. McComas as United States senator from Maryland and William Hughes for election to the house of representatives from New Jersey in 1904 by the National Association of Manufacturers, was revealed today.

With Colonel M. M. Mulhall, confessed lobbyist and strikebreaker, as the star witness, the senate lobby probe committee listened to a tale of secret manipulation of labor men that was astonishing in its completeness.

And it was only the "curtain raiser" of a tale that will tax belief, for Mulhall has promised to carry the story right down to the election of last fall.

Mulhall told how he hired labor leaders from Philadelphia and New York to accomplish his purposes.

Jealousy Between Probes

Jealousy between the senate and house lobby committees threaten the success of the general probe. With the senate in possession of the Mulhall papers and the confessing colonel testifying before its committee, the house investigators, under the leadership of Chairman Garrett, are moving heaven and earth to checkmate the Overman delvers. As a result the senate committee met at 9 a. m. today after being forced to swear Mulhall at a night session last night. The committee had recessed until 10:30 today when it was informed that the house committee planned a well organized kidnaping of the star witness. Chairman Overman immediately reconvened his committee last night and began with Mulhall on the stand, laying the foundation for the complete exploitation of his sweeping charges.

As Mulhall left the stand he was served with a subpoena from the house committee to appear before it at 9 o'clock this morning. Immediately Overman announced that his committee would meet at that hour and that Mulhall must disregard the house subpoena. The feeling between the committees is very bitter. The house committee takes the position that, as senators are now elected by the people, a senator is no better and has no more power than a representative. The senate lobby committee only charges the house membership with "playing politics."

Mulhall appeared at 9 o'clock. He

PERSEVERE

Rome was not builded in a day;
For centuries men worked away—
No quitters they.

And, if this town of ours is slow,
Remember it is often so
That cities grow.

Just keep on boosting it a bit;
Just show that you have faith in it
And never quit.

Just make your cash, and spend it, here,
And, day by day and year by year,
Still persevere.

This town amid the fertile loam
Is just as good a town as Rome—
So boost for Home!

Old-timers Tell of Early Day Thrills and Smiles

HOW A SCORE DIED IN WAR EAGLE FIRE

By Mark R. Byers.

"Do I remember the War Eagle?" Fred Clark, liveryman, horsetrader and inhabitant of La Crosse since he was "knee high to a duck," smiled. "Well, I think I ought to. She was one of the most famous boats on the river when the river was full of boats, and railroads in this part of the country were new things.

"Yes, many's the time I have dove off her pilot house into the river, when I was a kid and the gang of us were in swimming. I can well remember one stunt that Charley Dimon and I did. We dove off the pilot house of the War Eagle when she was docked up in Black river one summer before she burned. There were four barges, loaded with wheat, in the river right outside of the War Eagle, and Charley and I went under all four of them and came up on the other side.

No Stunts Like Those

"I have never seen anyone lately that does the stunts in the water that we used to work when we were kids. That Charley Dimon I was telling you about was a wonderful swimmer. He was considered the champion around here. See the fish market over there?" (Mr. Clark was standing on the steps of the city scales).

"Well, sir, many a time I've seen Charley Dimon dive off down stream and come up as far away as from here to the market. Isn't that so?" turning to a crowd of old "boys" of the town.

They all backed it up and began to swap stories of Charley's feats.

"And yet," continued Mr. Clark, "Charley was drowned up in British Columbia. But that's another story. You were asking about the War Eagle, weren't you?

"Yes, you can bet I was there when the War Eagle burned. That was in the days when the whole town turned out for a fire, if it was only a woodshed burning up. They used to get out that little hand pump and everyone that could reach it got hold of the brakes and "broke her down."

Burned in 1896

"The War Eagle burned in 1869, I think. She was a big packet, working north out of St. Louis. The trip she was burned she had a big load, passengers and freight. I remember there were a lot of silk bales in her hold—I saw my father fishing them out of the wreck next day. They were all ruined.

"She docked at night that time. The steamers then docked up in Black river, where the old Milwaukee depot was then. The dock was right beside the train sheds, and there was a row of elevators along by the sheds.

"There were no electric lights in those days, and when a boat got in at night, they stuck a row of torches along each side of the gangplank and down into the hold of the boat, so that the roustabouts could see to work. Ed Ford, now sidewalk inspector, was superintending the unloading that night.

Torch to Kerosene

"They had a couple of barrels of kerosene on board, and in some way one of the negroes got a torch too close to one of them.

"There was a big explosion that tore the forward part of the boat to pieces pretty much, and fires started immediately in half a dozen places. The boat was doomed from the first, and the efforts of our little fire department were ineffective.

"All the passengers were in their berths at the time, and undoubtedly some of them were killed by the explosion. No one ever knew how many of them died, but estimates made by members of the crew and passengers who survived placed it at not less than twenty. The books of the boat were burned with everything else, and very few of the dead were ever identified.

"Most of those that died were drowned. The pilot leaped from the house into the river, and swam to the foot of State street before he came ashore. Among those that drowned was a cousin of John Ulrich, who works in the office at Gund's now."

Mr. Clark has the story of the burning well in mind, and tells of numerous features of the wreck One of the queerest accidents incident to the disaster happened to Mike Sherman, who worked for the city for years in the street department.

Rope Caused Loss of Leg

Mike was detailed with an axe to cut one of the hawsers that held the boat to the dock. It was hoped that it might be possible to save some of the elevators near the water if the boat was allowed to drift out and down. The rope was strained rigid as a bar, and as the axe bit through the shore end snapped back and struck him on the leg. It lacerated the leg so badly it had to be cut off the next day.

The fire did not stop with the burning of the boat. It leaped from the dock to the depot, and the station, the first built in La Crosse by the Milwaukee road, was soon destroyed. A row of elevators, belonging to the railroad, and their contents, also went up, and the trainsheds were burned. A number of box cars and one passenger train went in the general conflagration.

Mr. Clark says that to his knowledge the hulk was never moved after the fire. The boat burned to the water's edge, and sank, and somewhere on the bottom of Black river, near the old elevators, its charred and blackened timbers are still collecting weeds.

CROWN PRINCESS OF ROUMANIA ACCUSED BY PREMIER OF CAUSING MANY SCANDALS

When Premier Titus Majoresco of Roumania flew at King Charles, perhaps best known as the husband of Carmen Sylva, the queen, and demanded that he either abdicate or sign an order calling out his army, he made a strong attack on the crown princess.

He declared that she had been the cause of innumerable scandals in the court and that the crown prince was so weak he could not control her. The daughter of the crown princess, Elizabeth, a very beautiful girl, has been reported engaged to the crown prince of England, and were she to become his wife she would ultimately be the queen of England.

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN

A meeting was held in the city park Wednesday afternoon of ladies interested in forming a park association, with the object in view of preserving and improving spots of natural beauty in and around Prairie du Chien. Considerable interest was manifested and another meeting will be held in the near future.

Hon. O. G. Munson of Viroqua was in the city Wednesday on business making the trip down in three hours. Mr. Munson was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Katherine and by Miss Doris Dyson.

The steamer Quincy was delayed here a few hours Wednesday, northward bound, by a slight accident to the wheel. Among the steamer's passengers were Mr. and Mrs. William Newton and daughter, of Omaha, who were making the round trip from Clinton, Iowa, to St. Paul and return.

Miss Nettie Otto arrived home this week from a visit in Milwaukee.

YOUR LIFE.

It is very foolish for any person to say, "It is nobody's business but my own what I do with my life." It is not true. Your life is put in your hands as a trust for many others besides yourself. If you use it well, it will make many others happy; if you abuse it, it will harm many others besides yourself.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Funny Place For a Bat to Take a Nap.

Bats Catch Mice.

DADDY rolled his chair to the window and looked out.

"There!" cried Jack. "What was that flying past the window?"

"It must have been a bird," said Evelyn.

"Birds, except owls, don't fly at night," Jack objected.

"That," daddy put in, "was a bat. Mr. or Mrs. Bat, as it may have been, is out looking for breakfast."

"For breakfast?" the children exclaimed.

"Yes; the bat family get up as we go to bed. They stay at home until it begins to get dark. This is not altogether because they cannot see very well, but because the food they seek is then more easily found.

"If you will watch a bat as it darts along at twilight you will notice that now and then it pounces on some flying insect.

"Rats are not birds, though they do fly about. They are really winged animals. During the day they hide in hollow trees or in dark corners of barns and outhouses. They are fine mousers and for that reason are useful to us, for they are on duty even when pussy is asleep. They have wonderfully keen hearing, and it is a smart mouse that can get away from a bat.

"I am afraid bats are not very clever. I have met at least one bat that did not seem to know its friends. It happened that I went to visit at an old country house one summer. The family with which I stopped had a little boy who was very fond of animals.

"During my stay we had some cold weather. There was a fireplace in my room, but it was closed with an old fashioned fireboard.

"My hostess' little boy told me that even in winter the room was seldom used. He came in to take down the fireboard, clean out the grate and build a fire in it for me. As he took out the board there was a great squeaking and fluttering, and something gray fluttered to the ground.

"'Why, there's a bat! It must have been staying in our chimney!' cried the little boy. Bats sometimes do.

"My little friend tried to pick up the bat, but it showed its teeth (yes, bats have sharp little teeth) and was so cross that we had to catch it by dropping a cloth over its head and picking up cloth and bat together.

"Then we carried it out to a big lilac bush in the yard and placed it among the bushes. Soon it crawled out of the cloth.

"The bat sat there blinking until twilight. The little boy says he saw it fly away. No doubt it went off to tell the bats it knew how rudely we had disturbed its midday nap and then put it out of its house."

DISPLAY TYPE FOR GOVERNMENT

An important change in the form of issuing notices of judgments which give the results of actions under the food and drugs act has been made by the department of agriculture. Hereafter the headings of these notices will show at a glance whether the government won its suit or the defendant manufacturer was acquitted. The importance of this will be appreciated by the concerns that have run counter to the government in this respect and in some instances the change will not be welcomed. It results from the fact that the department has discovered that salesmen have used these notices in the old form to prejudice a customer against a competitor's goods, even where the competitor has been acquitted.

This was possible with the old form because it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted. Many persons did not take the time or trouble to read the notice, and in many cases took it for granted that a notice of judgment meant in each instance that the government had won and that to sell the defendant's product would be to violate the food and drug act. The publication of the notice of judgment is the severest part of the penalty when the government has won its case against the manufacturer, because publication of the verdict against him is a serious blow to his business.

On the other hand, the department has taken the just position of having no wish to cause injury to those who have won their cases against the government. The new form will state clearly in its heading whether the judgment is in favor of or against the manufacturer, and thus make the punitive effect of a verdict in favor of the government still stronger, but relieve manufacturers who have won their cases from the danger of false use of the decision on the part of their competitors.

It would be well for other government departments to pursue a course similar to that of the department of agriculture in the publication of press notices. Once upon a time the newspapers were contented to publish the news with no attempt to display more than the subject at the head of the article. It was necessary often to read through the entire article before it could be discovered to what it related. The newspaper publishers learned long ago that the public appreciated a brief resume of the subject in display type. People nowadays have no time to give to matters in which they are not interested and a glance at the head lines is sufficient for them to learn whether or not they are interested.

SCANNING CRITICS OF WILSON ADMINISTRATION

The Outlook, of which Colonel Roosevelt is associate editor, is succeeding fairly well in its difficult task of playing fair with a president against whom it is grooming a candidate. Of the Wilson currency bill it says:

"The new currency bill is thus a democratic measure in the best sense of the word."

"Thus," in the above, refers to a change from the Aldrich plan whereby the government instead of the banks is given control of the financial situation.

The Outlook, while apparently full of reservations regarding the details of the tariff bill, recognizes it as representing the square intent of the president to enact the democratic progressive tariff idea, but coincides with Senator La Follette in that it regrets that a scientific tariff commission had no part in its drafting.

Also the Outlook complains rather petulantly that a republican minister who won his place under the civil service rules has been replaced by a democrat. There is no suggestion that the successor was unfit. However, it is hard for republicans to realize that the democrats really carried the last election, perhaps because they realize that, some by supporting Roosevelt and others by supporting Wilson directly, republicans contributed decisively to that outcome.

On the whole and under the circumstances, the weekly comment of the Outlook is open and in good taste—certainly its attitude is not one of carping criticism.

The fault we find with all the pro-republican progressive papers is that, in advancing the sound doctrine of the tariff commission, they fail to recognize this obvious fact: that had Wilson appointed a commission and awaited action by it before moving in the tariff matter, his administration would now be under suspicion, if not definitely discredited. There's still plenty of time to create a tariff commission, and plenty of work for such a commission. No doubt one will be proposed by Senator La Follette among his amendments to the Wilson tariff bill.

TAKE A SLANT AT THE ROLL CALL

In his list of men whom he says the National Association of Manufacturers were able to "reach and influence for business, political or sympathetic reasons," Colonel Mulhall mentions, in Wisconsin, Stephenson, but not La Follette; in Minnesota, Nelson, but not Clapp; Tawney, but not Anderson.

Get the drift?

The Madison State Journal publishes the list, and the assertion that in it are only standpatters, regardless of party, and not a single progressive, progressive republican or progressive democrat, "stands up."

Neither is the name of a single progressive found in Mulhall's list of those who actually received money for their influence upon legislation—influence exerted while they were holding legislative offices.

These significant facts might well be published under the official caption, "Information for Voters."

A WAR IN A WEEK TOO SWIFT FOR THE WEEKLY

"Is there another Balkan war? Last week the desultory fighting between the Bulgarians and Servians—"—Outlook.

Another war, and it's over. That's the trouble with a weekly.

One thing which is spoiling an otherwise pleasant summer is that every man must make the bluff that he understands the tariff when he doesn't.

The United States chemists tell us not to exert ourselves. Sure, we wouldn't if we had one of those fat federal jobs.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

The Sunday Paper

I start to read on Sunday;
One section I wade through;
I read again on Monday,
And then on Tuesday, too.
It's piled up all about me,
The part that I have read;
The parts I haven't touched yet
Are stacked up in the shed.
If I have lots of patience
And do the job up right,
And read without a let-up,
I'm through by Saturday night.

Humor of the Typist

A volume might be written on the blunders of clerks and typists. A recent one concerns a new employe of a Wall street broker whose ideas of orthography were peculiar.

"I'm afraid this won't do at all. See how you spelled sugar." He extended the dictated letter—there it was—"suggar."

"I'm sorry," said the newcomer, brightly. "It was a careless slip. I see I've left out the 'h'."

On another occasion an employer was dictating a letter to a Russian friend: "My dear Pagolskoipselsky."

When the draft came to him it read: "My dear sir."

"I thought it best to spare the typewriter, sir. Those Russian names are a terrible strain on the machine."—Strand.

The Last Resort

A farmer near Corning, Kan., whose son was an applicant for a position under the government, but who had been repeatedly turned down, said:

"Well, it's hard luck, but John has missed that civil service examination again. It looks like they just won't have him!"

"What's the trouble?"

"Well, he was short on spellin' and geography, and missed purty fur in mathmatics."

"What is he going to do about it?"

"I dunno. Times is mighty hard, and I reckon he'll have to go back to teaching school for a livin'!"—Mack's National Monthly.

His Public Bath

The only unoccupied room in the hotel—one with a private bath in connection with it—was given to the stranger from Kansas. The next morning the clerk was approached by the guest when the latter was ready to check out.

"Well, did you have a good night's rest?" the clerk asked.

"No, I didn't," replied the Kansan. "The room was all right, and the bed was pretty good, but I couldn't sleep very much, for I was afraid some one would want to take a bath, and the only door to it was through my room."

When She Mourned

From the west comes this:

Not so very long ago Erastus Wilson, one of the colored men of Fairville, died. Erastus had not amassed any great fortune, but he had kept up some lodge insurance—at least, his wife, Big Sally, had kept it up for him.

As soon as the funeral was over, Big Sally took the $32 that were left of the $175 after paying the funeral expenses, and outfitted herself in mourning garments. She took pride in her new purchases and showed them to her friends who came in to console her for the loss of 'Ras.

"But, my lawsy, Aunt Sally," demurred her just grown niece, who was one of the favored many, "what fuh yeh go an' buy dat black unaware? No one kin see 'em."

"Look heah, Miss Smarty," replied Big Sally, "ah wants you to know dat when I mourns I mourns."

Success Demands Sacrifice

Louis J. Horowitz, the skyscraper builder, who in twenty years has risen from a position of $3 a week to one of $100,000 a year, was talking in New York about success.

"I go to bed at 9 o'clock," he said, "and I get up at 5 o'clock. I play a little, but my play is exercise to keep me in good trim for my office. I play to work—as other men work to play."

Mr. Horowitz mused a moment; then, in his terse, epigramatic way, he said, shaking his head:

"Success demands sacrifice! Two men set out to achieve fame. One succeeded. The other lived."

The New Word

In the south they say it is customary for the waiter to ask when breakfast is ordered, "How will you have your aigs?"

One morning a man had ordered some sausage, cakes, rolls and coffee. When the waiter asked "How will you have your aigs?" the man replied: "You may eliminate my eggs this morning."

The negro looked at him and went to the kitchen. Returning shortly he said: "Eh, eh, mister, how did you say you would have your aigs?"

The man replied: "I said you could eliminate the eggs." Back went the negro to the kitchen, but returned pretty soon and said: "Say, mister, we have got a splendid chef, who has worked in the north, and he says he dun have no tools to 'liminate any aigs."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Easy for Pat

Pat was over in England working with his coat off. There were two Englishmen laboring in the same store, so they decided to have a joke with the Irishman.

They painted a donkey's head on the back of Pat's coat and watched to see him put it on. Pat, of course, saw the donkey's head on his coat, and, turning to the Englishmen, said, "Which of you wiped your face on my coat?"

If a man is smart enough to fool a woman it is because she wants to be fooled.

PIMPLES WOULD BURN AND ITCH

Over Body and Head. Sore Spots on Arm and Shoulders. Scratched Until They Bled. After Using Cuticura Soap and Ointment a Week, Eczema Left Her.

913 S. Hackley St., Muncie, Ind.—"When my little girl was a tiny baby she broke out in little fine pimples here and there over the body and head. They would be about the size of a quarter after they were broken out and would form a scab for a week or more. Then the scabs would begin to peel off. The disease would itch and give her much trouble. As she grew older they would spread until some places would be as large as a half dollar. Her clothes seemed to make the sores burn and itch. The sore spots were on the top of her arm and two on her shoulders. She would scratch them until they would bleed. Sometimes in combing her hair it would come out.

"I used ——— for a while but it did not seem to be any good and I used ——— also without result. She continued to break out with the eczema until I wrote for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them. I purchased some more and the scabs came off and I could comb them out of her hair and it healed up just finely. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment a week the eczema left her." (Signed) Mrs. Laura Graves, Nov. 27, 1912.

For treating poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have been the world's favorites for more than a generation. THE RED BUTTON

A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK

By Will Irwin

Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"You're thinkin'," responded Rosalie, reaching out to seize his thought, "that this is just my play to fill my boarding-house. Think it if you want to. But this is my proposition: you keep this room free until Monday, and if you want, you can have it permanent at twelve a week, which is what you paid Mrs. Moore."

"I'm sure I'm much obliged," said Tommy, suspicion departing. "I'll stay the week out, and make up my mind."

"Sensible," replied Rosalie. "I'll send up towels—and dinner's at six-thirty."

Now it happened that just before Tommy North left his room for dinner that evening, an hour of solitary thought had brought him to the nadir of his existence. Position gone—reputation (as he thought) gone—a charity guest in the boarding-house. For so, in his young melancholy, he translated the kindness of Rosalie Le Grange. Their conversation, reinforcing his bad two days with his mother, had plied remorse on his other miseries. He did drink too much. He was branded a drunkard; and no one wanted a drunkard. Vague ideas of beginning again in a new land floated through his mind. The life was out of him; and when life has gone out of the soul in this fashion, the Lord of Life is ever waiting to enter and take possession. Which is by way of introducing Betsy-Barbara.

We have taken little time to consider Betsy-Barbara. Let us view her now, as she stands, dressed in a blue frock for dinner, tapping at Constance's door. Betsy-Barbara's flesh and spirit were twenty-four; her heart was eighteen; her purpose was forty. In complexion, in such accessories of complexion as eyes and hair, in the hidden soul, she was a white creature, light-shot. Whenever even the darkest ray touched her hair, it flickered with gold. In full sunshine, even her brows and lashes glittered and twinkled. Her mouth was large and generously irregular; her nose was small and whimsically irregular; her violet-blue eyes were as clear as pools. Why the regularity of a Greek statue may go with absolute ugliness, and why features which fail to match may produce real beauty, is a question too hard for you or me or any other connoisseur of beauty. Now Betsy-Barbara, with a mouth all too large and a nose all too small and a pair of eyes which could not be classified for size, was ravishingly pretty. Of course, expression entered into the equation with Betsy-Barbara. She was eternally assuming a schoolmistress sternness which made a piquant contrast with the fresh skin of her, the blue eyes of her, the little pop-corn teeth that made her half elf, half butterfly. And when, in her schoolmistress solicitude over her listener—as over a bad boy—she laughed, the world's whole merriment was in her laughter. Betsy-Barbara had not really laughed for many days now. But she was young; the tides of life were flowing back. And as she stood there, waiting for Constance to rise and open the door, her merriment took flame from some sleepy remark. In that precise psychological moment, all planted by the fates, Tommy North came down the hall on his way to dinner. The laugh arrested him dead. The gaslight was on her hair so that it tumbled over her head—"like a heap of pulled molasses candy," he told himself. The door opened then. She vanished like a golden fairy caught in a mist of vapor.

A minute later, Tommy North was sitting in the dining-room at Rosalie's right—waiting for something. He found himself in a state of embarrassment uncommon with him. What was he that he should talk to a decent girl? And would she know that he was—the branded? But when, a moment later, she trailed in behind Constance like a luminous shadow, when Rosalie introduced them both by name, and when he recognized them as the women in the Hanska affair, one part of his embarrassment floated away.

Indeed, Constance herself did the simply tactful thing by referring to the matter at once. The other boarders had not yet come; they were alone with Rosalie.

"I'm so glad," she said, "that they have finally let you off, Mr. North. Nobody could have had any idea that you were guilty. It must have been a horrible experience." She stopped, and her eyes fixed on something across the room. "Horrible," she repeated.

"But everybody's going to get off easily, just as Mr. North did—you wait!" said Betsy-Barbara, touching her hand with a consoling little pat. Now the others were come. Miss Harding acknowledged Tommy's presence with a lift of her eyes which said: "Well, you're out of your latest scrape, aren't you?" Miss Jones was plainly thrilled by the proximity of this now famous personage; Professor Noll, lost in the metrical mastication of a new wheat-and-oats compound prepared by Rosalie, showed plainly his ignorance of the fact that Mr. North had been away at all.

What they thought had now become a matter of entire indifference to Tommy North. The rest of the boarders put down his rapt silence to embarrassment over his late experience; and they left him out of the conversation. It was just as well. When Miss Harding remarked, "Wasn't that a terrible accident up in the Bronx?" he would have answered, had he been required to answer, "They are just the blue of periwinkles." When Professor Noll said in his heavy and formal way, "Yes, indeed—oh, yes, indeed!" he would have said that the question—as a matter of fact it referred to the weather—had run, "Hasn't she a wonderful mouth?" Twice he laughed uproariously, causing Miss Harding to remark that he was getting back his spirits, anyhow. This was when Betsy-Barbara ventured a mild joke. Twice again she included him in the conversation. Once she asked for the butter, which impelled him to reach frantically for the salt, and once she referred to him the question whether one could reach City Hall, Brooklyn, sooner by trolley or by subway, whereat he got temporary reputation as a joker by answering "both." He sat dazed through the soup, ecstatic through the roast, and rapt through the dessert. Only when Betsy-Barbara and Constance rose together, did he remember that he had finished long ago. And then something happened which scattered the mists about him and brought him full into sunlight. Betsy-Barbara had turned at the door—turned back to him.

James C. McReynolds.

Attorney General James C. McReynolds is expected to retire from the cabinet September 1. It is understood that McReynolds has been seeking to launch at once a fight to the death on the trusts, while President Wilson prposes to attend to tariff and currency first and then go after the trusts in a careful fashion that will not give legitimate business interests cause for fear.

EVELYN THAW ON STAGE WITH J. CLIFFORD

LONDON.—This is the latest of the effervescent Evelyn Thaw, wife of Harry Thaw, now in Matteawan for the murder of Stanford White, on her account. Having been cut off from the Thaw purse, or so nearly cut off that she had to make her own living for herself and her child (which Thaw says is not his), she finally accepted one of the many offers from theatrical managers. At this time she is at the London Hippodrome dancing in "Hullo, Ragtime."

She is very well received.

"I am not here as a freak," said she to a reporter. "I don't want to be stared at because of my connection with a tragedy. I am a light stage artist. That has always been my profession and is my profession today."

NOTED MARKSMEN TO SHOOT IN TOURNEY

Amateurs and Professionals From Three States Will Take Part in Gun Club Shot Tomorrow

Marksmen from all over this section of the state, and from Milwaukee and Chicago, will participate in the all day target tournament to be staged under the auspices of the La Crosse Gun club at their park on the north side tomorrow.

The tournament is open to professionals and amateurs alike. It will open at 9:30 in the morning and continue through the day.

Among the shooters will be two former amateur champions—H. Hammersmith and J. V. Winter. Mr. Winter is one of the best shots of the local clubs, and is expected to get a piece of the $50 which has been put up for prize money. A large attendance is expected as the tournament is open to the public.

Shooters will be here from Sparta, Tomah, Bangor, Milwaukee, Chicago, Portage, Winona, Wabasha and many of the smaller towns about La Crosse.

Among the professionals who will shoot are W. D. Stannard, George E. Matthews, Chicago, "the boy shooter;" F. H. Soefken, Milwaukee; and C. C. Mitchell, La Crosse. Many well known amateurs will take part, including W. J. Raup, Portage, winner of the preliminary handicap, and Captain Jack Wulf, Milwaukee.

Called Music Nerve Poison.

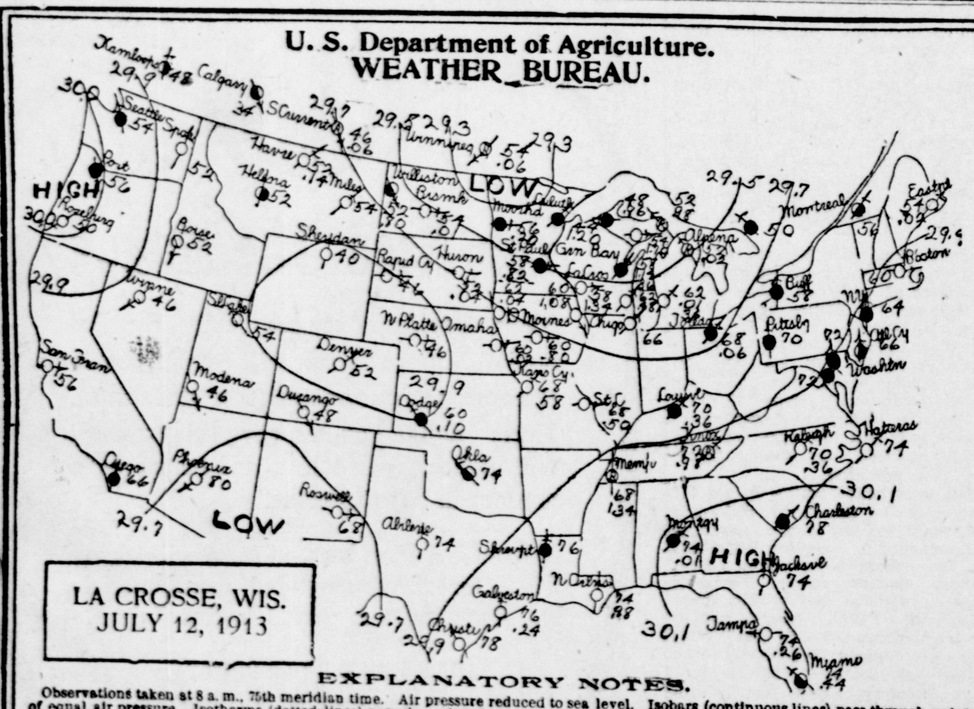

Frederick Nietzsche agreed with those who found no inspiration in music. Indeed, he regarded music as a nerve poison, and declared that some music—particularly that of Wagner and Tschaikowsy—deranged the minds of many who heard it. Tschaikowsky killed himself after completing his famous "Sixth Symphony," which, as several other have died by their own hands after playing it, has come to be known as the "suicide Symphony."

FORMER LA CROSSE RESIDENT CALLED

Mrs. Carl Joerschke, Once Physical Director of Schools Here, Dies in Chicago

Word was received this morning by Miss Mayme Foster, 936 Ferry street, of the death of Mrs. Carl Joerschke of Chicago, a former physical director of the public schools of this city.

The early part of this week Mrs. Joerschke was taken with a mild case of blood poison, resulting from a scratch on her face. The case was not taken seriously until a few days later when her face began to swell, and she was rushed to the St. Anthony hospital. She was operated on in the endeavor to alleviate the pain, but she died the following day in the hospital.

Mrs. Joerschke was 28 years of age. She is survived by her husband and two children, Palmer and Mildred, both of tender age. She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Detl, and two sisters, Mrs. R. Tess and Miss Emma Detl and one brother, Anton Detl. Mrs. Joerschke has many friends in this city who will deeply feel her loss.

HARMON CLARK DROWNS SATURDAY

Former North Side Resident Loses Life in River Near Coopersville

In a communication from the authorities of Coopersville, Mich., received by Miss Carrie Clark, 1216 Avon street, this morning, word was sent of the death of her brother, Harmon Clark, a former resident of the north side, through drowning, last Saturday morning at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Clark had been spending the Fourth of July in Allendale, a small town about five miles from Coopersville, and was returning on foot to his home. On his way he had to cross a small river. It had been his custom to use a small boat that was generally moored to the bank.

It is the opinion of the authorities of Coopersville that Clark, who was an excellent swimmer, took off his clothes, intending to swim to the other shore, and row back in the small boat. Clark told friends that in case he couldn't find the boat this is what he would do. Some hours later some boys who were walking along the shore found the clothes and notified the police of Coopersville who instigated a search for the body.

Within a few hours searching parties dragged the body from the bottom of the river, about three rods from where the clothes were found. The funeral services and burial took place the following day in Lamont, near Coopersville. He is survived by his sister and father in this city.

SOLONS TO SWIM FOR SENATE TITLE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The swimming championship of the senate is the title for which Senators Pomerene of Ohio and Owen of Oklahoma will battle some day very soon. The Ohio solon happened to remark that he used to be swimming champion of Killback creek, Holmes county, Ohio, and Owen, who is part Indian, grinned sarcastically. The two then agreed to the aquatic contest.

Maintained Belief in Ignorance.

Opposition to state education in the past was due largely to a belief that too much learning was not good for the masses. The worthy Hannah More even, who was one of the most earnest supporters of the movement for the establishment of schools for the poor in England, had very definite ideas as to how far the children should be educated. The curriculum, she declared, should comprise only reading the Bible and the catechism, and "such coarse works as may fit the children for servants," adding decisively, "I allow of no writing for the poor."

Hot Water a Curative Agent.

The action of hot water on the body is the simplest and most effective curative agent we have. Pain due to neuritis, sciatica, rheumatism or injury are relieved and the first stages of a cold are so greatly relieved that the cold will not progress further. Such a bath is in no way similar to the Turkish bath. A cold bath need not be taken after a hot bath and people living in the temperate zone will be greatly benefited by a really hot bath every other day.

Carrying It to Extremes.

"Your husband, I understand, is a clever after-dinner speaker?" "I understand so." "Does it keep him away from home much?" "Nearly every night. Would you believe it, when he does stay home it's got so he doesn't enjoy a meal unless I get up after the dessert and introduce him to the children and call upon him to make a few remarks?"

For Relief From Insomnia.

If you really do not sleep soundly, if you lie awake much of the night and toss about, something soothing is needed in addition to deep breathing. If it is possible, walk in a park, watch the reflection of the evening stars in the water, or the moon shining through the trees. Then a brisk walk home.

Live Not for Self.

To man it is said—you do not live for yourself. If you live for yourself you shall come to nothing. Be brave, be just, be pure, be true in word and deed; care not for your life, care only for what is right. So, and not otherwise, it shall be well with you.—Froude.

Many Have Wondered.

The Professor—"You say you are engaged in some original research. Upon what subject?" The Sophomore—"I'm trying to discover why the ink won't flow from my fountain pen unless I place it in an upright position in the pocket of a light fancy vest."

Mean Fling at Preacher.

WATERLOO MAN TO SUCCEED BOYD

H. R. Lee to Be Physical Director of Y. M. C. A. Beginning September 1, 1913

BOYD TO GO TO DALLAS, TEXAS

Wins Promotion to Large Field and Salary by Excellent Record Here

After four years of efficient service with the local Young Men's Christian association as its physical director, Mr. S. A. Boyd will sever his connection here August 1 to go to Dallas, Texas, as physical director of the Young Men's Christian association there. His duties there will begin September 1. Mr. Boyd arrived in La Crossse four years ago from Denver, Col., where he had been assistant physical director with Dr. W. A. Newhall. On his excellent record here he was sought by the Dallas association a year ago, but he turned the offer down at that time. It was presented to him again this spring and feeling that he could not let this larger opportunity pass again, he has accepted.

General Secretary A. C. Gran and the directors of the association, as well as the large number of members in the institution who have become closely associated with Mr. Boyd in his work, very keenly feel his going, but realize that promotion with larger salary and larger field was coming to him as his due. They all wish him success in his new field. Mr. Boyd is a man of the highest type, thorough Christian character and his influence among the young men and boys in the Association for the better things in life, spiritually as well as physically, has been very potent.

Yesterday General Secretary Gran completed negotiations with Mr. H. R. Lee, for three years past the physical director of the Waterloo, Iowa, association, to become physical director here, beginning September 1. Mr. Lee comes here with a most excellent record made at Waterloo and with the highest recommendations of business and professional men where he has worked, and the international secretaries and training school men speak in the highest terms of his personality, character and efficiency. Mr. Lee was born in Chicago, entered and graduated from the Janesville high school and then attended the University of Wisconsin. He is now completing his third year in the Lake Geneva physical director training school from which he was graduated at the end of this month.

MISS FRITZ HONORED

Word has been received by relatives that Miss Pearl Fritz of East San Diego, Cal., formerly a resident of La Crosse, was the only one of a class of thirty who succeeded in passing the teachers' examination, thereby being entitled to a certificate of honor. Miss Fritz is at the present time taking a post graduate course, and has accepted a position as teacher in the city schools for the coming term.

WOULD EXHUME BODY

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 12.—Encouraged by the decision of Alderman Brown last night to hold Herbert Johns of this city for court to answer the charge of murdering Miss Alice Crispell on the night of July 4 at Harvey's Lake, District Attorney John H. Bigelow went into court this morning and asked permission to exhume the body of the victim.

Modern Astronomy.

The popular idea of the astronomer, says a writer in the World's Work, as one who spends his time in sleeping by day and peering through the small end of a telescope by night, must be dismissed. "The greater part of the modern astronomer's time," says the article, "is spent in studying photographs," often with a microscope. "Paradoxical as it may seem, an astronomer today gazes more often through a telescope."

Absent.

Come along to the "movies." Follow the crowd. We sob when it sobs, and, in turn, laugh aloud. Our hearts freely leap to the maid on the curtain, whose job is to weep when her feelin's are hurtin'. We pity the chap who has landed in prison—would gladly exchange all our pleasures for his'n. But where is the fellow with pity to feel for the soul in the coop who is turning the reel?—Judge.

Eyeglass Screws.

If the tiny screws that hold your eyeglass lenses in place will not stay tightened and you are far away from a jeweler, tighten them with a pen knife and drop a bit of glue on them. When this hardens the screws will not work loose for many weeks.

Pampered Child Handicapped.

Just as the pampered lap dog becomes fat and diseased and unable to run about and bark vigorously and fight, so does the pampered rich child become mentally deficient and finds himself unable to cope with children of his age among the lower or working classes.—Exchange.

Use for Pyrography.

If one practices the wood burning art in your home remember that all wooden articles can be easily marked with the pyrography needle.

THE HEART IS THE DYNAMO OF LIFE

It is the perpetual motion of existence.

One of the commonest symptoms of heart disease is shortness of breath and weakness upon the slightest exertion with swelling of the feet and sometimes abdomen. Many cases of heart disease exist in persons who are apparently in bust and who are not supposed to have anything the matter with them. Heart disease occurs as a complication of Bright's disease, the heart becoming much enlarged and gradually weakens life advances. Rheumatism is one of the commonest causes of heart case.

If you are conscious that the heart is any more a part of your body than foot, it is a matter for immediate consultation with Dr. Turbin, the heart specialist and surgeon. Prompt attention oftentimes saves serious trouble and possible death. The chances for recovery depend largely upon to what extent the disease has progressed. With the aid of the proper heart tonics which will act directly on the muscles of the heart and enable it to perform its functions, patients are often enabled to live to an old age with comparative ease and freedom from pain.

Dr. Turbin has specialized on diseases of the heart for twenty years. He has studied every phase of heart weakness; every case is treated everything in the shape of a weak heart. He has found that often times the so-called heart troubles are not from the heart at all. He can show you wherein your hope may lie.

Have you fluttering of the heart?
Have you skipping of the heart?
Have you palpitation of the heart?
Have you pain in the region of the heart?
Have you pain in side of shoulder-blade?
Have you shortness of breath?
Have you weak, sinking, cold or dizzy spells?
Have you rheumatism?
Have you throbbing of the heart in excitement or exertion?

If any of these questions apply to your case, it would be well for you to take immediate steps. Consult with Dr. Turbin. Dr. Turbin is an expert on health and medicines.

of Berlin, Germany, the expert Specialist, who has visited La Crosse for the past twenty years, will be again in La Crosse at the Jefferson Hotel, Monday, July 21, 1913.

Hours, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m., and every fourth Monday thereafter.

TWO PAYDAYS A MONTH FOR R. R. MEN

A late ruling of the Illinois legislature, that all trainmen in the state must be paid in the future twice a month, on the first and fifteenth of the month, will probably affect trainmen in this city on the Burlington and Milwaukee railroads, running to Illinois points.

According to official messages received by offices of the Milwaukee railroad near the Wisconsin line, the main offices of the road are preparing to pay their men on the dates named by the new law.

Burlington officials in Illinois have also received notices from the heads of the company informing them that they will pay twice a month hereafter.

NO SECRET ABOUT THIS!

Did you read the other day about a certain prominent Mail Order merchant who was fined a large round sum by Uncle Sam for defrauding people through the mails? He advertised a so called vacuum cleaner which didn't clean. The government brought together at great expense a number of persons from various parts of the country, who testified to the worthlessness of the device. It cost Uncle Sam money, but he got it back in the fine paid by the Mail Order merchant.

The worthless vacuum cleaner cost these witnesses and many others money, but they didn't get it back, and they never will.

Plenty of other such concerns are working other frauds upon the public. Persons who buy a pig in a poke can expect to get bitten.

It is no secret that the country is populous with people who have been bitten by the Mail Order pig.

Here's the secret of satisfaction in buying things: Trade at home, where you can see what you're getting for your money.

Mr. Nix, representing Lawrence college, was in town last week. He expects to address the people at Centerville and West Prairie next Sunday afternoon and evening.

Infants Demand "Ragtime."

A song writer says ragtime is as legitimate music as the lullaby. "The ragtime," he says, "marks the passing of the old-fashioned mother who lullabied the baby into dreamland. Today the infant is 'ragged' to sleep, and, according to the statement of an experienced nursery maid, they will not close an eye unless this particular kind of music is hummed while they are being rocked."

Kept His Old Love Letters.

Two thousand three hundred love letters written by six different girls, were found in the room of a bachelor who died recently in Melbourne, Australia, at the age of eighty-two. The letters, which were preserved in an ivory casket, were tied with jeweled silver chains in bundles of 50.

MAYOR KICKS ON TIGHTS IN CABARET

CHICAGO, July 12.—Silk tights are all right, believes Mayor Carter H. Harrison, if viewed from a distance of—say, twenty yards. But silk tights encasing the figure of a cabaret performer who dances and kicks almost over your coffee are all wrong.

The city legal department today drafted an ordinance covering Mayor Harrison's views on the subjects of tights. It bars the wearing of fleshings by cafe singers or performers in amusement parks who dance close to the audience.

Suggestive songs and "animal" dances will be hit by the same ordinance. It will go to the council Monday night.

Winning the Greatest Things.

It is flattering to our lower natures to be envied. But for the esteem that is worth having, one kindly action, one tender, considerate word, will do more than the fullest measure of glittering success. Hustling, pushing, grabbing, will win many rewards according to their desert; the nature of the reward meets the nature of the effort. But they will not win affection, they will not win tenderness and love. —Exchange.

Undaunted Lover.

"Muriel," said the old gentleman, sharply, "that young man you had in the parlor last night is dull of comprehension. All I had to do was cough when the other chaps remained too late, and they would take the hint and depart. Did this one say anything when I coughed last night?" "Yes," replied the beautiful daughter; "he said the next time he called he was going to bring you some cough-drops."

Historic Crimes and Mysteries

By WALT MASON

Royal Revenge

QUEEN Christina, of Sweden, only daughter of the great and good Gustavus Adolphus, kept all the gossips of Europe in a ferment for many years. After holding down the throne of her fathers for four years, she voluntarily abdicated in favor of her cousin, in order that she might travel and enjoy herself. At that period she was young and beautiful and the most learned and accomplished woman of her time, and it is not strange that the "Welcome to Our City" sign was hung out whenever she deigned to visit a burg.

Toward the close of the year 1657 she honored France with her presence, and the palace of Fontainebleau was turned over to her with the compliments of the season. She was attended by a royal retinue of servants, and also by her grand equerry, the Marquis Monaldeschi.

This gentleman, as his name suggests, was an Italian, and for a considerable time had been the queen's favorite. They were recognized as lovers and, since the queen had abdicated, it seemed more than possible that they would be married and go to housekeeping. The marquis was extraordinarily handsome and gifted in all the graces and polite mannerisms of the time. He was a charming man, but entirely unscrupulous. When duty took him away from his royal mistress they wrote love letters, just as ordinary people do, and the letters of the marquis always breathed undying devotion. And, while thus convincing the queen that he lived for her alone, he was quietly laying siege to a young Roman girl of wealth and beauty.

"He has failed to justify himself, and he must die."

In his letters to this girl he ridiculed the queen shamefully, applying contemptuous names to her; and, not satisfied with this baseness, he sent several of the queen's love letters to her, that she might enjoy a good laugh. But Nemesis was on the false lover's trail.

There was a certain cardinal who had long been jealous of the marquis, and who was anxious to be the queen's favorite. The cardinal had his spies, and soon learned the details of Monaldeschi's treachery. By some means he secured possession of the entire correspondence with the Roman girl, and turned the letters over to the queen. Christina must have had a bad hour when she read those letters, in which her love and trust were ridiculed.

On Saturday, November 10, the marquis was summoned to the galerie des Cerfs, a long and gloomy apartment of the palace. He entered, bowing and smiling in his accustomed manner. The queen was there, with Father le Bel and three armed strangers. Christina's face was as cold and rigid as marble. As the marquis advanced, smirking, her glance brought terror to his heart, although he had no inkling of what was in store. Turning to Father le Bel, she said:

"Hand me those papers."

He produced the letters, which had been intrusted to him by the queen. She in turn handed them to the marquis.

"Do you recognize these?" she asked.

There was an icy sweat on the brow of the marquis, and his legs trembled under him.

"I have never seen them before," he stammered, at last.

"Look again," said the queen, sternly. "Are those not your seals?"

He could say no more. Helpless, speechless, trembling in every limb, he could only look imploringly at the merciless woman. The three men closed around him and drew their swords.

"You are a traitor," said the queen, and turned her back on him. The three armed men drew closer. The marquis saw that his hour was come. He had been known as a man of courage, but in this extremity he was a picture of abject terror. He seized the queen's gown and entreated mercy. He wailed and wept and howled. And she looked down at him with unforgiving eyes and lashed him off with her riding whip.

"Father le Bel," she said, "you are witness that I treat this dog fairly. I give him all the time he needs to justify himself, if he can."

Hearing these words, the marquis began a long plea, trying to explain, trying to apologize, trying to convince the queen that his repentance was sincere. She stood like a statue and listened to it all. When he had said all he could think of, the queen turned again to the priest, as calm and inexorable as ever.

"Father," she cried, "do what you can for the good of his soul. He has failed to justify himself, and he must die."

The good priest dropped on his knees before her and prayed that she would have mercy.

"I have said the words," answered the queen, "and no power under heaven can make me unsay them."

Then she left the room, and Monaldeschi was left with the priest and the three executioners. He groveled on his knees in a sickening way, like Monmouth at the feet of King James, and implored the priest to make one more effort. So the priest went to Christina and begged for the wretched man's life, but she was adamant.

Le Bel returned to the gallery and announced that his errand had been useless.

"Prepare yourself to die!" cried the chief of the executioners, and the marquis and the priest prayed together. Then the butchery began. The marquis wore a suit of mail under his clothes, and this turned the swords of the executioners; so they hacked him over the head and neck, and he dragged himself over the floor like a wounded snake, and called on God for mercy. But there was no mercy for him in heaven or on earth. One of the butchers finally stabbed him in the throat and ended his misery.

At that period murders were not regarded seriously, but even calloused France was indignant over this barbarous crime. The Cardinal Mazarin, whose conscience wasn't at all sensitive, wrote officially to Christina saying, "a crime so atrocious must be considered sufficient excuse for banishing your majesty from the court and dominions of the king, who, with every honest man, felt horrified at the lawless outrage just committed on the soil of France."

The reply of Queen Christina is one of the finest examples of pure insolence in all the archives of history. It is too long to be reproduced here, but the following paragraph indicates its sentiments:

"Understand, all of you, servants and masters, little people and great, that it was my sovereign pleasure to act as I did. I neither owe nor render an account of my actions to any one—least of all to a bully like you."

But she left France in a hurry just the same. Three years later the cousin in whose favor she had abdicated died, and she returned to Sweden with the intention of wearing the crown again. But the brave and honest people of Sweden refused to be governed by a murderess, and she was told that she would be deprived of her revenues if she remained in Sweden. So she became a wanderer on the face of the earth, and died at Rome, a bitter and lonely old woman. She wrote her own epitaph, which is unsurpassed for stern brevity: "CHRISTINA LIVED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS."

Better Than Drugs.

For people who are severely troubled with the inability to sleep soundly, some diversion is needed, a party, an entertainment or theater. Reading poets and philosophers will help, and very often a hot drink will prove a great help in inducing a natural and restful sleep. But above all, breathe deeply of good pure air just before retiring, and have your sleeping room well ventilated.

BELFAST RIOTS ON BOYNE ANNIVERSARY

Clubs and Rocks Fly When Orangemen Parade to Celebrate Overthrow of James II

MANY TROOPS ARE IN THE CITY

Fear Trouble Because of Imminence of the Enactment of Home Rule Bill

BELFAST, July 12.—Scores of heads were cracked with clubs, revolver shots were fired and much property damage was done here today in riots which marked the celebration of the 223rd anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, which fought July 11, old calendar, 1690, resulted in the final overthrow of the last British Catholic monarch, James II. Many were injured when the nationalists attempted to break up the parade of Orangemen, the feeling between the contending forces being made more bitter in view of the imminence of the enactment of the Irish home rule bill.

Fearing trouble the military authorities had taken stringent precautions for the preservation of order. General Count Gleichen, the king's cousin, commander of the troops in Belfast, had his men under arms in the barracks. Strong detachments of local police and the royal Irish constabulary, much hated by Belfast Orangemen, camped all night at strategic points.

In the rioting early today the nationalists and unionists fought with clubs and hurled rocks and bottles. They fought for two hours, many were smashed. Repeated charges by the police dispersed the rioters.

U. S. WORKING ON BARGE INQUIRY

Judge Reid's Work to Have Congress Recognize the Value of River to Bear Fruit

WILL RECOMMEND TOWBOAT TYPE

Have Investigated Problem of Craft Best Fitted for Freight Carriage on Mississippi

Judge R. S. Reid's long campaign in Washington to have congress recognize the value of the Mississippi river to freight shippers all along the valley is about to bear fruit, according to a letter received by Representative John J. Esch from W. H. Bixby, chief of engineers of the United States army.

The engineering corps of the army is on the last lap of investigations to determine the most suitable model of tow-boat or barge for use on the Mississippi. Their report will be made within a few months, it is expected.

The investigation is said to be the direct fruit of Judge Reid's work before congressional committees. While holding a federal position connected with the river work, Judge Reid became interested in the cheap freight possibilities of the river.

He went so far as to travel abroad to see how the conditions were met in Germany, where river traffic is highly developed. He became imbued with the idea that the tow-boat was the solution of the problem, and succeeded in getting congress to authorize an investigation into the best type of tow-boat for the Mississippi.

Following is the letter received by Mr. Esch from the government engineering chief:

Washington, July 8, 1913.

Hon. John J. Esch,
La Crosse, Wis.

Sir:

1. Replying to your letter dated June 28, 1913, I have to inform you that pursuant to a provision in the river and harbor act of June 25, 1910, a board of four officers of the corps of engineers was appointed for the purpose of making investigations and designing and constructing two experimental tow-boats of modern but different types for use on the Mississippi river and its tributaries. The efforts of the board have been confined to collecting preliminary data and information as to desired types of tow-boats, etc., making tentative sketches, designs, and estimates of most desirable boats and barges.

2. Incidental to the work of the board, two members spent about three months in Europe in the summer of 1911, inquiring into the status of steamboating on European waterways; also several tests have been made at the model tank at Ann Arbor, Mich., of barge models of various types and resistance of radial and feathering wheels, the tests being witnessed and discussed by the board members and by Prof. Sadler of the University of Michigan, who conducted the tests under the board's direction.

3. The board has made thorough investigations into the most desirable types of tow-boats and barges for use on non-tidal rivers, and has considered the necessary loading and unloading facilities, and is now considering the comparative value and economy of the use of radial and feathering wheels and of coal and oil as fuel.

4. The preliminary work of investigation is nearly completed and as soon as practicable the recommendations of the board will be submitted for approval.

5. The report of the board, when completed, will be transmitted to congress and probably published in document form.

Very respectfully,
W. H. BIXBY,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. Army.

MULHALL TELLS HOW HE ELECTED SENATOR ALDRICH

was accompanied by a husky capitol policeman, his body guard.

Robert M. Carter, former attorney general of New Jersey, who has been retained as counsel of the N. A. M., took a seat a short distance from the witness stand. He was accompanied by James Emery, general counsel of the N. A. M., who scowled at Mulhall.

The latter seemed amused at the evident animosity of his former "boss."

Senator Reed took up the examination of Mulhall, showing him an envelope and asking what the memorandum on the back was.

"It is five names submitted to me by Senator Foraker to hand to President Taft regarding the congressional campaign in Ohio in 1910."

"Did you take part in that campaign?"

"I did."

$200 For "Close District"

The names were not read and Mr. Reed then read a letter from Marshall Cushing, written in 1904, which accompanied a check for $200 which Mulhall was warned to "be careful in cashing." This $200 was used, the witness said, in "a close congressional district."

Mulhall then identified a check for $200 sent to him by Cushing to be used in an attempt to secure the republican congressional nomination in the Fourth Maryland district in 1904. He spent the money and considerable in addition, but was defeated. In the letter accompanying the check, he was told that the N. A. M. was fighting the eight hour law and that anything he could do in that campaign would be appreciated.

In another letter sent him Sept. 13, 1904, Cushing told him that he would thereafter receive a check each Friday morning while he retained his connection with the Workmen's Protective association, an organization of workingmen he had formed to work for the republican ticket. His expense allowance was $40 and in addition, Cushing sent him $100 weekly in cash.

"What were you to do to earn this money?"

"Field work on the road and lobby work here in Washington."

"What was the N. A. M.'s object?" asked Cummins.

"Election of men favorable to their interests and the killing of legislation inimical to them," replied the witness.

Mulhall declared that C. M. downs, secretary for United States Senator McComas, was in the pay of Cushing at all times.

"I quarrelled with Cushing over that," said Mulhall. "I did not think it right, in fact considered it a dirty trick, to buy out the secretary of a public man. Why, Downs was turning over McComas' private correspondence to Cushing."

Mulhall identified circular letters prepared by Cushing in the New York office and sent out on the letter head of the Workingmen's Protective association attacking McComas and his organization as "unfair to labor."

Aided Aldrich

A letter from Mulhall to Senator Foraker offering to aid Senator Aldrich in the campaign of 1904 in Rhode Island, was then read. A number of letters from C. E. Alden, secretary to Foraker, arranging for Mulhall's trip to Rhode Island were then put into the record. Mulhall conferred with Senator Aldrich and kept him advised at all times of his operations in Rhode Island.

Asked to name the men who had aided him in his political activities, Mulhall said: "Most of them were outside of Maryland. They were Michael Collins of Philadelphia; Secretary Curtin of the building trades of Philadelphia; Jacob Cassiler of New York; William Ryan, an electrical worker of New York, and George Burke of New Jersey, who was later a deputy collector of internal revenue."

Mulhall said the N. A. M. annually backed republicans at the primaries.

After Senator McComas was defeated for re-election to the United States senate through the efforts of Mulhall and the N. A. M., Cushing sent Mulhall to see him to "feel him out." Cushing told Mulhall that McComas was a candidate for a place on the federal bench and suggested that he tell him the advocacy of eight hour bill had cost him the senatorship and that he ought to repudiate his advocacy of that measure.

"If he honestly means to let up, you can promise him to remove every obstacle to his political ambition," read the letter, which Mulhall was directed to burn.

Mulhall saws McComas and the latter tried to make peace with him, but positively refused to abandon his advocacy of the eight hour bill.

When the committee reassembled at 2:30 it was announced by Chairman Overman that Mulhall had some personal matters to attend to and that the public hearings would be postponed until Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The committee then went into executive session to consider the Mulhall letters in detail.

Overman Refuses

Chairman Overman of the senate lobby committee, today sent Chairman F. J. Garrett, of the house lobby committee a letter positively refusing to release Colonel M. M. Mulhall to the house investigators.

After reviewing the circumstances of the subpoenaing of Mulhall, by the senate committee, and his being subpoenaed last night by the house committee, Overman said:

"Without intending the slightest disrespect to the house of representatives or to your committee, it will be obvious to you, that we shall be obliged to retain Mr. Mulhall until his examination is completed, at which time we will be glad to release the witness, subject to be subpoenaed by you, and will make available to your order any and all papers, now or which may come into our possession in connection with this matter."

Would Re-open Viaduct

A resolution by Alderman Mahoney to re-open the Rose street viaduct, which has been closed pending the installation of a new bridge, was referred to the proper committees after a sharp argument. Alderman Torrance said the bridge was in such bad shape that accidents might result from its use. Mahoney answered that it was a great convenience to the public, and that it could be strengthened to prevent accidents.

The council received a petition from J. F. Schrank and W. J. Atchison who were refused liquor licenses at the last meeting, asking for a refund of their $200 deposits with their applications. The petition was granted.

The mayor was authorized to appoint a committee of five aldermen and himself, to represent the city at the state municipal convention at Neenah.

TWO DEAD, TWO DYING IN COLLISION

BERLIN, N. J., July 12. — Two women are dead, the husband of one is dying and a young girl is in a serious condition as the result of an automobile smash up here today. Mrs. C. T. Wingate was killed when the machine struck a telegraph pole. Mrs. Scanlon died this afternoon. Mrs. Wingate is unconscious, suffering with internal injuries and the daughter has been suffering so from shock that she will probably die.

STORK IS AHEAD OF GRIM REAPER

The stork scored twenty-nine more than the grim reaper in the last month, according to the vital statistics for June, given out today by Register of Deeds Andrew Thompson. Week Financial

Bank Statement

NEW YORK, July 12.—The weekly actual bank statement issued today showed the following changes:

Surplus decrease $541,400.
Loans increase $1,313,000.
Specie decrease $4,382,000.
Legals increase $7,262,000.
Deposits, increase $17,884,000.
Circulation decrease $30,000.
Surplus reserve $19,414,800.

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Evening Post.)

NEW YORK, July 12.—As was naturally to be expected after yesterday's complete dullness, today's market on the New York Stock exchange was purely nominal. Prices held firm, but the changes were wholly unimportant, except for a 3 1-2 point rise in Canadian Pacific.

There is perhaps one deeper cause of hesitation, underlying all the rest and not dependent on any idea so concrete and distinct as financial calamity. It is perplexity which pervades the minds of all meditative people, as to exactly what sort of change is coming about in our institutions generally—possibly more in the political and social field than in finance. The feeling that important alterations, temporary or permanent, are coming to pass in the attitude of society itself towards many fundamental questions of the day, is a sentiment which will naturally inspire uncertainty, even when it does not cause larm.

BRIG NIAGRA AGAIN SAILS LAKE ERIE

ERIE, Pa., July 12.—With the sailing of the brig Niagara out of Erie harbor last night as she did 100 years ago, will come to an end the Perry centennial celebration in Erie. The Niagara will be towed to Lorraine, Ohio, by the Wolverine and will be on show during the celebration there.

Last night was given over to a mardi gras festival and fully 5,000 people took part in the noise making and hilarity.

Camp Gridley, one of the attractions of the celebration, broke camp at sunrise today and with the sounding of the big drum the tented city became a crumbled mass of canvas.

FEDERALS VICTORS IN HARD BATTLE

EAGLE PASS, Texas, July 12.—In a battle lasting several hours at Monclova, south of here, yesterday, a force of Mexican federals under General Maas defeated an equal number of constitutionalistas commanded in person by Governor Venustino Carranza. Monclova was the headquarters of the constitutionalistas and its capture is regarded as specially important to the federals. No report of the losses has been made, but many are known to have been killed and wounded on both sides.

WOULD FORBID GUARDS

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Employment of armed guards for mines, industrial plants and railroad property is forbidden under heavy penalties in a bill drawn by Senator Martine of New Jersey and to be introduced in the upper house on Monday. This is the first legislative result of the inquiry into West Virginia's coal mining war, conducted by a senate committee of which Martine is a member.

"My bill may be declared unconstitutional," said Martine today, "but I am on humanity's side and willing to risk the action of the courts. The mine guard system is intolerable in a free country."

THIRD REGIMENT CAMPS AT SPARTA

Two La Crosse Companies Leave Today for Week's Outing at Camp Douglas

The 120 men of Companies B and M, of the Third Regiment, Wisconsin National guard today entrained at La Crosse on their way to Sparta for their annual week's outing and camp at Camp Douglas. The two La Crosse companies under command of Captains J. M. Bradley and F. H. Fowler left over the Milwaukee railroad and arrived in camp shortly before noon.

Battery D, of the U. S. regular army which camped at the Interstate fair grounds last night, left at 5:30 this morning intending to make the overland march to Camp Douglas before evening. The battery is in command of Capt. Green. The battery of six guns and fifty men and horses arrived in La Crosse from Fort Snelling at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and immediately went into camp at the fair grounds to rest up for the trip today.

Monday morning the men of the Third regiment will begin the rifle contest. Several La Crosse marksmen have entered and it is expected will capture honors in the meet. The latter part of the week will be devoted to the study of military problems under the instruction of Captain Robert Wescott of the regular army.

The regiment and camp is under the command of Orlando Holway, colonel of the Third regiment. The regiment will break camp next Saturday in time to return Sunday.

TWO DROWN AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July 12.—Patrick Higgins, keeper of the Lake View crib, reported to the police this afternoon that a man and woman were drowned by the capsizing of a rowboat two miles off shore. Lifesavers picked up the drifting boat but were unable to find the bodies.

HOUSE REPUBLICANS PLAN WHIRL AT CAMINETTI-M'NAB FUSS WHEN RESOLUTION COMES UP

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Another whirl at the Caminetti-McReynolds-McNab fuss was planned by the republicans in the house today. The minority planned to stir up a fresh partisan outburst. Whether a quorum was in town perplexed both sides of the controversy.

When the house convened its "unfinished business" on the calendar was the report of the judiciary committee recommending quashing of the resolution of Representative Kahn of California directing Attorney General McReynolds to submit all papers bearing upon the affair.

Republican Leader Mann and Representative Kahn were determined to air the Caminetti case on the floor of the house, or break up proceedings, by forcing adjournment upon a point of no quorum.

DOWLING ACCUSED OF THREATS TO MOTHER

Pleading not guilty to a charge of threatening his mother before Judge John Brindley in county court yesterday afternoon, Tom Dowling, 23 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dowling of the north side, will face trial in county court at 10 o'clock Monday morning. According to the young man's parents' statement to the police young Dowling threatened his mother when she refused to give him money on his demand.

MAHEGAN RETAINS TITLE

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 12.—Hughie Mahegan, light weight champion of Australia, retained his title tonight when he knocked out Holberg, the Danish champion, in the seventeenth round of their fight. In the ninth round Mahegan put Holberg down for the count of nine, but the Dane survived the round and appeared stronger for the twelfth. Mahegan outclassed Holberg throughout.

ALLEGED SWINDLER NOT EXTRADITED

CHICAGO, July 12.—The Swiss government today lost in its attempt to extradite Hans Bauder, charged with swindling his fellow countrymen out of $600,000 by selling alleged worthless mining stock, Commissioner King ruling that Bauder had committed no extraditable offense.

As Bauder left the federal building he was rearrested by officials of the immigration bureau, who charged that in 1909 he attempted to enter this country with a woman not his wife. The immigration officials allege that Bauder later entered under an assumed name.

AMERICAN BEATS GERMAN

NOTTINGHAM, England, July 12.—R. Norris Williams of the American Davis cup tennis team today defeated Otto Froitzheim of the German team, in the last singles match of the semi-finals for the international trophy. The result had no bearing on the standing of the Americans, who won the semi-finals by defeating the Germans in the doubles yesterday. Williams lost the first set, but took the next three. The scores were: 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1.

F. Johnson of Philadelphia, the reserve player of the American team, appeared against Oscar J. Reutzer in the last match, taking McLoughlin's place, and defeated the German. The score was 7-5, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

This victory made a clean sweep for the Americans. They won five straight matches, four singles and one doubles.

MISS ORWELL WEDS MINNEAPOLIS MAN

Miss Josephine Orwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Orwell, 1314 Caledonia street, was married yesterday to Leonard E. Sagen, of Minneapolis, formerly of La Crosse. They were married by Rev. Father J. H. Gaughan in the St. Anthony's parsonage. The young people left for a honeymoon trip to Denver, Col., after which they will settle in Minneapolis. Mr. Sagen is an employe of the Adams Express company.

LINDBERGH SCORES DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Declaring that the democrats of the house banking committee are acting "outrageously wrong," in holding secret conferences on the new currency bill, Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, progressive, today introduced a resolution proposing an investigation of the "star chamber methods" by a select house committee. He said that the administration bill will give birth to a "monstrous monopoly" in handling the nation's money.

3,000 OUT OF WORK

LAPORTE, Ind., July 12.—A report that all the plants of the Rumely Agricultural Implement company will shut down August 1 and continue closed until January 1, was confirmed today at the offices in this city. Three thousand men are affected in Richmond, Ind., Battle Creek, Mich., Stillwater, Minn., and Laporte, Ind.

STAVES OFF COLD LANDS IN COURT

Because he took precautions against taking cold after having been caught out in the heavy rain yesterday afternoon, Dr. Isador Lewin, a peddler of eyeglasses, paid a fine of $12.50 in police court this morning. According to his confession to Judge Cronon Dr. Lewin was out vending spectacles yesterday afternoon and was caught in the heavy rain. He said that he took two or three drinks to prevent his taking sold. He landed in court under a charge of drunk and disorderly.

WILSON JUST LOOKS AT CLUBS

HANOVER, N. H., July 12.—President Wilson played his usual game of golf on the links here today and also went shopping in search of clubs that might be used by Mrs. Wilson and his daughters. He did not find the sort of clubs he wanted, howeber. The drive over to Hanover from Harlakenden was made cautiously this morning to avoid a repetition of yesterday's mishap. In his search for golf clubs the president entered the store of Charles Dudley, Jr, swung clubs about the store, thanked Dudley, but did not buy.

HEAVY SEA HOLDS BACK BIRD BOATS

800 Foot Volplane to Surface of Lake Saves Glenn L. Martin and Passenger

PENTWATER, Mich., July 12.—A strong southwest wind lashed the surface of the lake today and made it improbable that Aviators Roy M. Francis and Beckwith Havens, leaders in the Chicago to Detroit flying boat cruise, would get away before noon. They planned to fly over Charlevoix this afternoon and make no stops until they reach Mackinac island tonight.

Francis overhauled Havens late yesterday and the two birdmen took dinner together after covering a distance of 216 miles since the start of the flight at Chicago. Glen L. Martin, third man in the race, was at Muskegon, fifty-four miles south of here, preparing to resume his flight today and Walter E. Johnson is resting at Robertsdale, Ind.

A daring volplane from a height of 800 feet to the surface of the lake saved Martin's life and that of his mechanician late yesterday when the air valve of his carburetor dropped out. Martin made the glide to the surface of the lake two miles off shore at Muskegon.

PANAMA, July 12.—Plans for a monument to Theodore Roosevelt to be erected at the north end of the canal by Pananamas were announced here today. The movement is headed by Horacio Rangel, former secretary of education. A large part of the necessary $50,000 is on hand.

JOHNSON IN PARIS

LONDON, July 12.—Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, arrived here today from Paris. He again declared he did not expect to return to the United States.

Outwitted the Cabby.

One day it was raining very heavily in Berlin, and a wealthy merchant, on leaving the exchange, hailed a cab and asked to be driven to a distant part of the city. On the way the merchant discovered that he had forgotten to put his purse in his pocket. What was to be done? On reaching his destination he got out of the cab and said to the driver: "Will you please give me a match? I have dropped a gold-piece on the floor of the cab." Instanter the cabman whipped up his horse and soon disappeared round the next corner.

Only Poisonous English Snake.

A colony of vipers has been discovered in the Ramsey Fen and Raveley district of Huntingdonshire, England. The viper, which was at one time plentiful in England, is the only poisonous snake now found in the country. Its bite is often very severe, but rarely fatal to man.

Thrift.

Thrift has its roots in self-denial. It is in no way identical with avarice, though the spendthrift may denounce every practicer of frugality as a "miser." It is the practical outcome of that prudence which aims at accomplishing great things by humble means. Without it the world in which we live would still be an "unweeded garden."—Rochester Post-Express.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

A PRIZE PACKAGE

By MARTHA McCULLOCH-WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"You are a nice person! Very nice," Ashley said, her tone withering.

Billy Boss caught her two indignant hands, crying joyously: "At last you realize it! Now, you can't possibly refuse me a third time!"

"No—because I shan't let you ask me," Ashley countered, her head high. "Just as a matter of curiosity I'd like to know what you did yesterday. You said you were coming to take me to the picnic."

"Wouldn't you like to know" Billy asked teasingly. Ashley made a face at him and started to the door. He blocked her exit, took both her hands again, and said as he drew her to a seat on the sofa: "I'd tell you—only then you'd know as much as I do—and a husband has to be always the superior in knowledge."

"Does he? Dear me! You'd better look for a wife among the feebleminded inmates then," Ashley returned, twisting her face wholly away from him.

He appeared not to mind in the least, since he still held her hands. Presently she felt him slip something on her finger—the ring finger, at that—and made to snatch away the hands. He kept them tight in his, saying coaxingly: "Shut your eyes and think how it looks—then open them and tell me how you like it.'

Instead, she faced instantly about, glanced at the finger upon which a diamond of fair size and perfect luster winked merrily, drew a long breath, but said loftily: "You must have been buying a lot of prize packages to get that," nodding at the ring. "You are sure always to find inside—the thing you don't want, at first."

"I like prize packages—that's partly why I'm so soft on you," Billy retorted, his eyes dancing. "But guess again. Your ring never came from any sort of package."

"H—m! Reckon the ten-cent store must have in a new line of jewelry," Ashley mused, her head on one side. Billy laughed uproariously, and slid an arm about her waist. She sprang up, rushed half way across the room, stamped her foot, and said, "You know I'm not that sort of girl—how dare you—"

"Behave, Touch-Me-Not! I do know," Billy soothed. "But you are that provoking. I had to punish you some way. Please, please, ma'am, forgive me. I'll never do so any more—not until next time, anyway."

"I won't ever forgive you—anything—unless you tell me," Ashley poufed.

Billy grew rather grave. "I'll tell you,you, sweetheart—all in good time. But not for a year."

"Indeed! Why?" Ashley questioned.

His mouth grew firm. "Because telling means betraying—some other body's business," he said. "You can't think anything merely my own would have made me disappoint you?"

"Is the 'other body' Marion Sinclair?" Ashley hazarded. She saw by Billy's start that her question had hit the mark. "In that case," she went on freezingly, "I want to know nothing about the matter—neither now, next year—nor at any time."

"Glad you take it so sensibly," Billy said through shut teeth. He was thoroughly angry. Jealousy always made him so. And he knew himself so innocent, so wholly in the right. Besides nobody should be jealous of poor Marion—she carried weight enough without, notwithstanding she was so rich and so beautiful. She had a monomaniac mother—a fine smiling gentlewoman—except when the murder lust laid hold on her—then a demon. There had been family trouble as well. Marion's father had forbidden her ever to see her mother, in fear of the sight's possible influence on his child. Word had come to her secretly that her mother, dying and semi-sane, prayed piteously for a last interview. Marion had appealed to Billy, her father's ward, who was like a brother, to take her, secretly, safely—and he had done it.

He shuddered recalling the wild ride—the big red motor devouring space in the darkness. They had run the hundred miles at racing speed to find they had been tricked. Mrs. Sinclair had roused, laughing, and made them understand she was going back with them. It had taken all day to quiet her—when at last she lay sleeping heavily, the car with two unhappy passengers had again raced home. Coming and going in the dark, nobody was the wiser—Billy had plead business to his associates. Marion's maid had given out that she was suffering from violent headache. Her heavy eyes, and pallor made good the assertion—but she knew, as Billy did, that if her father got an inkling of the truth, there would be an end to freedom for her, and much unhappiness in the home.

Therefore, Billy was honor bound to keep silent. The doctors had given them grewsome hope—in a year at most the madwoman would be at peace. So Marion had really taken a last good-by—and gone home so heartstricken Ashley would have wept had she known. Unknowing, she was hard and furiously angry. "Take back your—trinket," she said, tossing the ring to Billy. "It will look better, on Marion's finger—she will prize it, I dare say, for the giver's sake, even though she has so many others."

"Ashley, did you ever know me to lie?" Billy demanded. She answered him only with a scornful smile. He went on, holding himself hard: "You can't deny—I have the name of being truthful—on my honor."

"Don't swear by—an unknown quantity," Ashley cried, darting away.

He strode after her, but she slammed the door to the garden in his face.

Plunging through a French window, he leaped a low railing and confronted her, caught her hands, hard but not ungently, and said, his voice tense:

"If you send me away now it is for always. You know I love you—you only. I admit you have ground of complaint, but you might trust me when I say there was an imperative reason for my neglect. You hold my heart, my life in your hands. Are you going to crush them?"

"Good-by,' was all Ashley could trust herself to say, but she ran off among the roses, her head high, whistling in her best key: "Come, haste to the wedding." She knew Billy hated to hear her whistle, being very angry, very unhappy, she had a mad wish to hurt him in small things as in great.

A minute later she heard him galloping headlong down the avenue. But she did not hear the fall of black Selim's small hoofs for another two years. Even then—but Fate plays her dramas without regard to staging. She had gone at dusk into the garden and stood upon the very spot where she had flouted Billy, sighing and wishing, wishing with all her sore heart, she had not been so cruel. For now she knew—Marion had told her, when her mother had been safely buried—of the night journey, and all that had followed it. She had been ill for weeks—in her fever she had revealed enough to send her father into a frozen rage. When at last she was well enough to face him, he had taxed her with deceit, she had admitted it and then the end had come. He had fallen dead at her feet—heart failure, said the doctors. She knew it was rather the shock to his pride in her. Therefore she felt herself in a sort his murderess, therefore, also, she was renouncing the world, going into a nursing sisterhood where her money and her small strength might be spent in helping those in sore need of help.

Billy had not been named, except casually. But Ashley had felt Marion's purpose—as she felt also her hopeless love for Billy. He had gone away—no doubt he had forgotten them both, or recalled them only as the shadows in a dream. He had written to nobody save his attorneys—even in Marion's heartbreak he had given no sign of sympathy.

Ashley felt she could not forgive that—then, all in a flood, she understood—he had been cruel because only thus could he be kind. She dropped her face in her hands, shivering faintly though the night was balmy. At last she said half aloud: "I was blind, but now I see clearly."

Something stirred at the gate—she heard steps, and turned to hide. But though love may be blind a yearning lover is otherwise—the next minute Billy had both her hands and was bending to look in her eyes by the light of the moon. After a minute he dropped them, took something from his pocket and held it toward her, saying: "I have still the prize-package habit—are you glad or sorry?"

She caught the winking spark of the diamond, but put it away.

"If you want a real prize package—how about a live one?" she whispered, putting her hands over his arm. Next minute she was in his arms—next week a happy though meek and chastened wife.

When Antelope Was Plentiful.

Transcontinental travelers, who nowadays in their journey through the west seldom see any game larger than a prairie dog or jack rabbit, will be interested in this item reprinted from the Rocky Mountain Herald of some fifty years ago: "Passengers report that antelope have never been seen so numerous as now. Herds of antelope larger than any flock of sheep in the world are frequently spoken of."

Tramp's Memory Was Faulty.

A Kansas City (Mo.) man met a tramp in the street the other day and was asked for a meal. The man consented with surprising rapidity. He took the tramp to a restaurant, ordered him a meal and then called an officer and identified the tramp as one of a gang that had held him up and robbed him a few days before.

Some men are proud because they are inveterate smokers, which is another case of pride without reason.

BANDIT KILLS IN HOTEL ROBBERY

Shoots Night Watchman Who Enters as He Forces Clerk to Open Safe

COLORADO SPRING, Col., July 12—A lone bandit entered the office at the Cliff House in Manito early today and in an attempt to rob the cash register and safe, shot and killed J. Whitehead, night watchman. The robber escaped. A posse is pursuing.

Cornelius Casser, night clerk, was forced behind the counter by the highwayman who threatened to shoot him if he made an outcry. Whitehead appeared unexpectedly and in an attempt to get away and summon assistance was shot in the back. He died almost instantly.

Omit the Word "Can't."

It is said that Napoleon the Great hated the word "can't," and that he never used it if he could possibly help it. In that respect most people differ from Napoleon. If they were to substitute the word "will" for "can't" they would be able to accomplish much more.

DROP CZOLGOSZ' CAPTOR

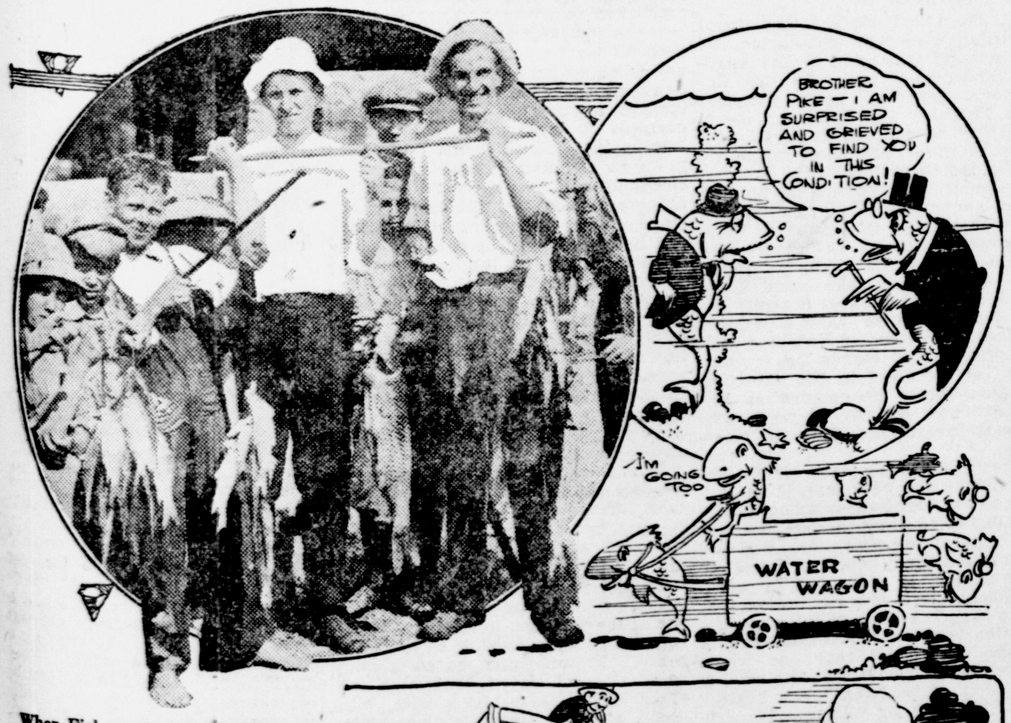

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 12.—The shake up in the police department has cost Kansas City the services of John P. McCauley, the police officer who arrested Leon Czolgosz, slayer of President McKinley. At the time of the assassination McCauley was a police sergeant in Buffalo. He was detailed in charge of the squad of eleven policemen who were to assist secret service men in guarding the president.

Judge's Two Rules.

Judge Hans Hamilton, at the Blackpool (Eng.) county court, replying to an expression of regret at his forthcoming retirement, said that, in order to expedite business and save time, he always had in front of him, written in large letters upon a piece of blotting paper, the words: "Do not talk. Do not make jokes."

It sometimes happens that the coming man is a goner before we know it.

BOYS HARVEST EASY PREY WHEN FISH GET ON GRAND DRUNK

When Fish went on a Jamboree.

Multitudes are feasting on drunken fish hauled in by the basket full at Marion, Ind., after 1,916 barrels of beer was turned into the Mississinewa river from the Indiana brewery under direction of a United States revenue officer. An army of small boys assembled on an island and scooped them up as they tried to get over a riffle. They sobered when placed in fresh water. Thousands of crawfish also became intoxicated and crawled up on bridge piers so thick that they could have been scooped up by the barrel if anyone had wanted them.

Moses Prepared For His Work. Ex. ii:11-25; Acts vii:17-29; Heb. vi:-23-27.

Golden Text—Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Matt. v:5.

(1.) Verses 11-12—About how old was Moses and what kind of a life had he lived up to this time?

(2.) Seeing Moses had been raised in the court of Pharaoh how did he come to have such a patriotic spirit for his own race?

(3.) On what principle would you approve or condemn Moses for slaying this Egyptian?

(4.) Would a man ever be justified in slaying another man today, and if so, under what circumstances?

(6.) Verses 13-14—Did Moses show the proper tact and the necessary patience in trying to settle this dispute between two of his brethren? Why?

(7.) Under the circumstances can you wonder or not that the Israelites whom Moses rebuked resented his interference? Why?

(8.) Moses appears to have thought that his slaying of the Egyptian was not known. Now would you say or not, and why, that there are some things that it is right for us to do and also hide from our fellowmen?

(9.) In what sense did Moses fear? (See Heb. xi:27.)

(10.) Verse 15—The cause of Moses fleeing from Pharaoh to Midian is, from the circumstances, of human origin, but would you say or not, and why, that God sent him there to prepare him for his future work?

(11.) Verses 16-20—Can you give a description of the position or circumstances of this priest or prince of Midian?

(12.) What is the significance of the fact that every man should be an actual priest in his own household?

(13.) What does it show when a man who has been raised a prince willingly helps draw water and attends to the flock of these young women?

(14.) Why should all young men, no matter the degree of their culture or wealth, be trained so they can work when necessary?

(15.) What lessons may we learn from the hearty hospitality of this priest or prince of Midian?

(16.) Verses 21-22—For what occupation did Moses hire himself to Reuel?

(17.) Did Moses do well to take a wife and would you say or not, and why, that it is the duty of every normal man to marry?

(18.) Verses 23-25—How do we know that God hears and answers the cry of all who are in trouble?

(19.) What was God's covenant with Abraham?

(20.) Acts vii:17-29—When and how did Moses learn that God meant him to deliver his people from Egypt?

(21.) How did Moses' forty years as a shepherd fit him for his great work to deliver Israel from Egypt?

(22.) Heb. xi:23-27—By whose faith was Moses hidden three months as a babe?

(23.) What is the evidence that Moses was a man of God before he left Egypt?

(24.) Why do men of God need discipline or training for their work the same as other men?

Lesson for Sunday, July 20, 1913. Moses Called to Deliver Israel. Ex. iii:1-iv:20.

Bad Example.
"My cook won't obey me," complained the bride.

"You mustn't mind her. All cooks are like that."

"I don't mind her, but I don't like to have such an example constantly before my husband. Sooner or later it will have its effect."—Washington Herald.

Its Origin.
Muggins—Where did the expression "You can't keep a good man down" originate?

Guggins—I'm not positive about it, but I think it was what Jonah said to the whale.—Springfield Union.

A Financial Pessimist.
Gaye—Yes, he is what you might term a financial pessimist. Myers—What's a financial pessimist? Gaye—A man who is afraid to look pleasant for fear his friends will want to borrow something.

The Important Question.
"I can't live without your daughter!"

"Well, can you live without her father?"—Judge.

Wit of Sages, Folly of Clown, Stolen Gems from Humor's Crown.

Overlooked the Court
Two lawyers before a probate judge recently got into a wrangle. At last one of the disputants, losing control over his emotions, exclaimed to his opponent:

"Sir, you are, I think, the biggest fool that I ever had the misfortune to set eyes upon."

"Order! Order!" said the judge gravely. "You seem to forget that I am in the room."

Tommy Was a Traveler
A little girl whose father was a commercial traveler sat on the porch holding a kitten and, creeping close, her mother heard this:

"Kitty," said the young miss, "I know you an' I know your mamma, an' I know all your little brothers and sisters, but I ain't ever seen your papa."—then a brief pause—"I spec' he must be a traveling man."

Not That Kind of Touch
Cardinal Gibbons made the opening prayer at the last democratic national convention in Baltimore.

There were two doorkeepers on the main door. One was a very devout Catholic and the other was not.

As the cardinal came down the aisle to go to his home the Catholic doorkeeper leaned across to the other and said:

"Hey, Jim, be sure to touch the cardinal when he goes out!"

"What pocket has he got it in?" asked Jim hoarsely.

POEMS You Ought To Know

BREAK, BREAK, BREAK.
(By Alfred Tennyson)

Break, break, break,
On thy cold gray stones, O, sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

O, well for the fisherman's boy
That he shouts with his sister at play!
O, well for the sailor lad
That he sings in his boat on the bay!

And the stately ships go on,
To the haven under the hill;
But, O, for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!

Break, break, break,
At the foot of thy crags, O, sea!
But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me.

Our War With France.
There was a war between this country and France soon after the adoption of the constitution, caused by French depredation upon our commerce. For three years, from 1798 to 1800, there was practically a state of war between the two countries, although war was never officially declared by either side. The United States government sent several warships out on the ocean, between which and the French war vessels there were several pitched battles, notably that between the Constellation and the Insurgente, in which the American ship won a "famous victory." The French "spoliation" difficulties were finally settled by the treaty of December, 1801, and the war came to an end.

Carnivorous Plants.
That such plants as "Venus' fly trap" actually catch and squeeze to death flies and other insects alighting on their leaves has long been known, but the discovery is comparatively recent that the plants digest the softer parts of their prey by means of a peptic ferment secreted by the leaves. These are real instances of plants feeding upon animals.

Rocky Vineyards.
Some Italian vineyards are cultivated on the faces of almost perpendicular cliffs.

IN The WORLD OF WOMEN

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, Suffragist leader, has been tendered the new post of dean of law in its relation to women at the Chicago College of Law.

More than 800 widows have applied for pensions under the New Jersey Widows' Pension law, which became effective July 4th. The law gives relief to widows who have children under 16 years of age. Miss Frances Day, general agent of the State Board of Children's Guardians, will supervise the administration of the law. Not more than half the applicants are entitled to aid, it is declared.

Club women and civic workers of Dobbs' Ferry N. Y., led by Mrs. Herbert Carpenter, have organized a movement to secure an athletic field, tennis court and a first-class moving picture theater, to be owned and managed by the town.

The recently created Oregon Welfare commission took its first action last week regarding the fixing of a minimum wage for women workers when, after investigating conditions in a cannery where a number of girls struck, the body secured an agreement from the owners to pay $1 per day, with as much more as could be earned by piecework.

Julia Morganstein, of Philadelphia, a 17 year old "runaway," attempted a hunger strike because detained by the police. She held out for two days, but could not resist temptation when ice cream and strawberries were placed before her at a time when the thermometer was 96 in the shade.

CHURCH NEWS

Church Too Has Efficiency Experts
A wholly new form of work is coming into the church on its business side. It is that of efficiency experts. Within the last few years, to employ an analagous illustration, firms of mechanical engineers have set themselves the task of taking hold of manufacturing plants of all kinds and making them pay where before they have not done so. These firms are increasing in numbers, and just now technical journals are carrying advertisements for graduates from scientific schools, seeking new men for growing efforts. These engineers are coming to have their specialties, as marine work, cotton spinning, woolen mills and others. In a few instances wholly new machinery has been invented to meet peculiar needs, and turn losing concerns into successful ones.

To maintain all churches in the United States, their upkeep and extension, takes about $360,000,000 a year. Naturally some propositions financially fail. Church efficiency experts, like mechanical efficiency engineers, are the logical need. A down town church, its former supporters removed to the suburbs—what shall be done with it? A religious convention in a given city—shall there be one big meeting or many small ones? Ought there to be a limit to number of persons to be permitted to belong in one church, and ought that limit to be affected by the population of the town in which the church is situated? Which is more effective, one big church or two small ones? These and similar vital questions on the business side of religion in America are bringing the profession of church efficiency experts into the field.

Church of England To Revive Prayerbooks
The proposal of influential leaders in the church of England to revise the Book of Common Prayer comes at a time when the Episcopal church in this country is considering, although not officially, a revision of the American Book. The last time the latter was revised was in 1892, when it was much enriched, but when things already therein were not much touched. The agitation for the present revision is along the lines of the English one, and for the same reason, but it includes also the insertion of new lectionaries, or passages of scripture to be read on various occasions, and regularly for first and second lessons in Sunday service. It is said to be likely that the approaching general convention in October will name a commission to take up the revision of the American Book.

Christian Endeavorers Hold Convention
At the twenty-sixth international Christian Endeavor convention, at the moment in session in Los Angeles, President Clark, who was Endeavor's founder, points out that next February the Endeavor movement will have closed its first generation of life—thirty-three years. He makes the suggestion to the Endeavor movement everywhere the holding of an annual increase and efficiency week, beginning in February, 1914, to cover February 2, the anniversary of the movement's birth. He would have each society take stock, so to speak, and find out if it is really doing those things for which it was organized. He talks of Endeavor millionaires—not in money but in numbers of workers in the churches. These numbers he reckons at 10,000,000 now actively at work who were trained in the Endeavor meetings.

President Clark's plans for the observance of the week include an evening to consider Sunday school teaching, one to consider the efficient record, a third to social night, and the closing Sunday a religious round up in numbers, in gifts and in work. President Clark says the notion that there is such a thing as religious dissipation is much overworked, and increases the belief that one whole wewewk, the evenings at any rate, is not too exhausting for a healthy Christian man or woman. He recounts the larger service of Christian Endeavor to social welfare. He thinks the original society which he founded has grown in the generation to 100,000, and the original fifty members to 5,000,000.

No Use For a Label.
Shopman (to undecided customer come to purchase a dog trough)—Would you like one with "Dog" painted on it, madam? Customer—N-no. You see, the dog can't read, and my husband doesn't drink water!—London Punch.

TRAVELING ABROAD IN A SUITCASE

NEW YORK, July 9.—The first part of July finds many fortunates aboard a steamer en route to the old land. Those who have already made the trip will require no advice as to dress. But notwithstanding modern facilities for travel, there are many who will this summer make their maiden voyage.

What to take along by way of clothes is a much discussed and very vital question. There are those who go abroad and remain three or four months, with only a handbag for the necessary toilet articles, one nightgown and one silk, usually white, shirt waist. It is not to be denied that these women enjoy the greatest freedom. They are exempt from customs and petty annoyances about "boxes," as our English friends say. They are free to drink in the beauties of mountain, valley, castle, garden and gallery, with no thought of whether trunks have arrived or are held up at the border. They are fulfilling the old adage that "one is free only when without possessions;" but, notwithstanding all these advantages, there are also many disadvantages. They miss much of social life, which is one of the purposes of all travel tending toward a knowledge and acquaintance with other people, and this because of the good old-fashioned pretext "nothing to wear." Teachers and students who travel will find it to their interest in every way to strike a happy medium between the fortunate rich, with proverbial "big box, little box, hand-box and bundle," and no end of trunks down in the hold, and those traveling in a handbag. Those who are desirous of appearing daintily and fashionably dressed will find the gown of the first illustration very charming and altogether suitable for dinners and dances, not only on the steamer, but afterward at pensions and hotels. It will be equally smart for like purpose for the stay-at-home. The development was in ivory-white crepon and white and light blue crepon brocade. The chemisette and flounces of tulle are very soft and effective, and easily replaced when mussed or soiled. A girdle of Gobelin-blue silk finishes the costume, particularly pleasing because the quality of the material chosen withstands creasing.

It is advisable to take along a steamer trunk and a wicker suitcase. Travel by sea is frequently stormy, invariably cold and requires a steamer rug and much warm clothing. It is no longer customary to wear last year's winter suit in mid-ocean. The steamer outfit is now one of the smartest in milady's wardrobe, and this is possible at little expense. Either jacket or skirt may be of all-wool tartan, with blue or green color, harmonizing with old ocean himself, predominating. The other part of the costume is of plain serge of this shade. A distinctive note is thus inconspicuously struck. Sufficient variety is imparted to the outfit by shirt waists of French flannel crepe de Chine or wash silk. These are in evidence only in the dinning-salon, library, or sitting rooms, or, on the promenade, may be seen casually peeping from the jacket at front-closing or throat.

The trunk containing steamer rug, woolens and suit may be stored on landing, and traveling suit or frock of a shade which ignores dust, such as gray, tan, or brown, and of serviceable material, preferably ratine, is donned. If the dress be chosen, it is advisable that it be fashioned with a peplum, as this gives a much more finished and smarter appearance. If the suit is given the preference, it will be equally smart fashioned with Bolero jacket or Balkan blouse. The Bolero is made on the unfitted lines easily developed at home. It has large revers, and may or may not be finished at the throat and front-closing by frills of lace. Invariably, however, buttons decorate the outer edges. The Balkan needs no comment. It has been speaking very volubly for itself for some months past, and will not be silenced for some months to come. The girdle, however, made of tartan silk, is supplanting the Bulgarian and Oriental colorings so popular during the spring.

South from Paris or Germany to Southern France, Italy and the Tyrol only light-weight clothing can be tolerated. A gown such as this of the second illustration for midsummer climates will be much appreciated. When the waist-scarf is discarded, it is suitable either for traveling or sightseeing. The addition of the gayly-colored scarf makes it sufficiently dressy for luncheon at the hotel, or afternoon tea on the piazza, or in the garden tea-rooms, of which there are so many delightful ones throughout all Europe. It was developed in navy blue summer silk of soft flexible quality. The scarf is of Cubist silk, with turquoise blue background and tomato red, green and yellow motifs. The drapery at the left side of the skirt is very stylish.

The question naturally arises, what more should the traveling case contain? First of all, toilet articles. These and fresh linen are of vast importance. Of cold cream, there should be a plenty, for grimy face, throat and arms, and cologne for spraying as a tonic over the cream-cleansed skin. Of underwear as few pieces as possible should be carried. Vests and drawers may be knitted or of silk and, if desired, may be washed overnight in one's room. One dainty petticoat for wear with the evening gown described will be necessary. White crepe de Chine or batiste, with flounce of shadow lace, is preferable for this purpose. A petticoat of navy blue pongee, surah silk or crepe de Chine would be suitable for wear with the navy blue silk frock. If desired, the same underskirt might be worn with the traveling costume. Three pairs of shoes and one pair of easy slippers should suffice. These should be accustomed to the feet before sailing, as continuous standing and tramping are very fatiguing both to feet and limbs. A half-dozen pairs of hose, matching in tone either shoes or frocks, a dozen handkerchiefs, three or four corset covers and two nightgowns, of either cotton crepe, crepe de Chine or wash silk, will be sufficient for the woman who attempts to see either Europe or America in a suitcase.

Citq Plumbing Inspector Will Rediderson of Huchinson, Kan., has been provided with a motorcycle on which to make his tours of inspection.

While there ought to be a law against ragtime, enforcing a lid against such syncopated silliness would be some good job.

If one would enjoy peaceful domestic relations, tell your wife occasionally that she knows more than you do.

FEUD TAKES THREE

NEWROADS, La., July 12.—Three are dead and one fatally wounded as the result of a feud. Felix Major, aged 24 years, was assassinated from ambush during the night and his father mortally wounded, the latter crawling two miles to give the alarm to clansmen. Felix's brother was slain by Joseph Stromain two weeks ago. Three days later Stromain committed suicide.

Don't try to drown your sorrows unless you take the precaution of tying a stone around the neck of each one.

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, July 12.—Today's short session saw wheat take its most disastrous slump of several weeks, July dropping from 86 1-2 to 85c at the close and September going down from 87 7-8 to 86 1-2c. Buying demand was limited and with rains general over the northwest there was general selling.

Favorable weather influenced selling in the corn pit and corn prices lost 1-2 to 5-8c during the morning, July closing the day at 59 1-8c and Sept ember at 59 3-8c

General liquidation by oats holders caused a sharp break at the start but there was some buying on the dip that caused partial recovery. When the market closed July was 1-8c and September 1-4c under the opening prices.

Offerings of provisions were extremely small and with hog prices higher the market had a strong undertone.

HOUSE LOBBY PROBE HALTED BY SENATE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Unable to turn a wheel, because the senate lobby committee has possession of Colonel M. M. Mulhall and his correspondence, the house lobby investigating committee held a futile session today. It adjourned this afternoon until Tuesday to ascertain "where it is at."

Although subpoenaed by the house committee, neither Col. Mulhall nor M. J. McMichael, former chief page of the house, who was named by Mulhall as a "spy" of the N. A. M. upon house members for fifteen years, appeared before the house committee today. They were held by the senate body.

Man's Superiority Early Shown.

Rude sculpture dating back, scientific authorities believe, at least 200,000 years, show that primitive man made representations of other creatures at a stage of human development when the conditions of existence were little in advance of those prevailing among the higher mammals of that period. But no other denizen of the earth manifested the slightest desire or ability to make images of anything.

Come To The MAJESTIC And Be Comfortable

Watching The Scoreboard

There were wild times at the Polo grounds. Twenty-two hits for 14 runs was the final result of the slaughter of the Cubs at the hands of the Giants. Jeff Tesreau did not share in the victory being driven from the mound, but most everyone else took a hand. Fletcher had four hits and Murray five.

Another shift in the Phillie lineup did not bring a victory over the Pirates and Dooin's men are now seven and a half games behind the New York Giants.

The Reds made a clean sweep of the series with Brooklyn, taking the fourth game yesterday. The Dodgers are now in second division. President Ebbitt excused it by saying that Umpire Quigley is incompetent.

Pitcher Tyler winged Manager Huggins twice in one inning, the second time knocking him unconscious, but the Cardinals took the game.

Possibly encouraged by reports of what was happening in New York, the Yanks fell upon the White Sox for 17 hits and scored one of their most best games of the year. They turned out a home run in the sixth with the bases full. The combined National and American league scores between New York and Chicago was 25 to 5.

Boehling of Washington hung up his ninth straight victory by downing Detroit. Stanage got three of the Tigers' six hits.

Bender and Bedient of one world's series, or another fame appeared in opposite roles. Bedient was driven from the mound by the St. Louis team in the first inning. Bender tarried with the Cleveland Naps and won his game easily.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

New York, 14; Chicago, 4

NEW YORK, July 12. — The Giants walloped the Cubs 14 to 4 yesterday and set a new season's record for safe hits, twenty-two being recorded during which Lavender and Pierce were knocked out of the box. Ritchie relieved Pierce and was hit hard but held the Giants better than his predecessors. The hitting of Murray, Merkle and Snodgrass was a feature of the game. Score:

Felt She Was Neglected.

There was company in the parlor, and little Marjorie, overheard, listened longingly to the sounds of fun and laughter that from time to time floated up to her chamber. When, by and by, her mother came in for a last look and kiss, she found her darling wide awake and reproachful. "Oh, mamma," was the unexpected exclamation of the small maiden, "I've been so lonely, lying here all alone, while you were having such a liberal time downstairs."

Essential Thing.

"De wust thing about arithmetic," said Uncle Eben, "is dat a whole lot o' folks gits de idea dat any kind o' figgerin' is all right if dey kin finish wif a number dat has a dollar mark in front of it."

Scientific Gardening in England.

By the use of French gardening methods, relying largely upon hotbeds and glass jars in the colder months, single acres of ground near London are being made to yield from $2,400 to $3,000 in vegetables annually. There is a product to market throughout the year. Melons, little grown in England, are forced by a steady temperature of 90 degrees, generated by manure.

RECALLS HIS PLIGHT HELPS IMMIGRANT

ST. PAUL, July 12.—Thirty-three years ago 9 year old Adolph Olson was detained at Castle Garden, N. Y., while the immigration authorities made sure that his parents were in Nebraska and that he had a home to which he might go. Today this same Adolph Olson, now Governor Adolph Olson Eberhart, is striving in New York to aid Alois Lermer, aged 15, a German lad, who is being detained at Ellis Island.

Does Friendship Do This?

"It may be true for some natures, as Leonardo said, that 'if you are alone you belong wholly to yourself; if you have a companion, you belong only half to yourself;' but it is certainly not so with me. With me friendship never divides; it multiplies. A friend always makes me more than I am, better than I am, bigger than I am. We two make four, or fifteen, or forty."—American Magazine.

Some Spectacle.

"Strange as it may seem to you," said Mrs. Lapsling, with pardonable pride, "I was a good speller when I was a little girl and went to school. Once I spelled the whole school down, and for one time in my life, anyway, I was the dinosaur of all eyes."

Her Explanation.

"You asked what the trump was at least a dozen times last night!" "Yes, Charley, dear. But I didn't really have to. I did that to show I was taking an interest in the game."
